Definite Decision on Neutrality Due Tomorrow

Long Parley Held With President

Barkley Says Message Probably Would Be Sent to Congress on Amendments

Panama Acts Reverses Policy on Her Flag Upon American-Owned Ships

Washington, Oct. 7 (AP)—President Roosevelt was reported authoritatively today to have advised congressional leaders that he favored changing the neutrality law to arm American merchant vessels and permit them to travel to belligerent ports and now-forbidden combat zones.

Those who conferred with the Chief Executive on the neutrality issue reported, however, that he was undecided whether to request the two changes in a single message or first to ask authority to arm the ships and then recommend later an amendment to permit them to travel anywhere.

Washington, Oct. 7 (AP)—A White House conference on modification of the neutrality law recessed today until tomorrow morning, when Senate Majority Leader Barkley predicted, a definite decision will be reached.

For more than two and a half hours, President Roosevelt, Secretary of State Hull, Vice President Wallace, Harry L. Hopkins and eight House and Senate leaders of both parties conferred in the Chief Executive's study.

As it stands now, the act forbids the arming of American merchant vessels and their entry into designated combat zones and belligerent ports.

Barkley told reporters: "We discussed the whole question and recessed until 10 tomorrow, at which time we will meet and reach a decision."

Asked whether the general objective of the parley was complete repeal of the law, he merely repeated that the whole subject was one which was under discussion and another meeting would be necessary before any announcement could be made.

Message Is Likely
Barkley said he assumed that Mr. Roosevelt would send a message to Congress when the whole issue has been threshed out.

Late complications were added to the situation by Panama's sudden reversal of policy on the arming of merchantmen.

Senator Connally (D., Tex.), however, was inclined to look on Panama's action as a boon for neutrality modification, contending that it would help speed authorization for the arming of American flag ships—something the neutrality act now bans.

The Panamanian decision, reached by the cabinet council yesterday, said flatly that Panama henceforth would revoke the registration of any merchantman mounting arms. It means that American-owned ships, which have transferred to Panamanian registry in order to operate in combat zones prohibited by the neutrality

TANKER SURVIVOR TELLS OF ATTACK

Village of Highland's Water Shortage Is Serious

I. C. White Also Struck By Shells

Seaman Declares Ship Raided by at Least One, Possibly Two Submarines

Three Men Drown

Tells of Missing Men Jumping Into Sea, Disappearing

Rio de Janeiro, Oct. 7 (AP)—A 19-year-old survivor of the Panama flag tanker I. C. White declared today that "one and perhaps two" unidentified submarines torpedoed and sank the American-owned ship without warning in a midnight attack 600 miles off Brazil.

H. W. Ackerman, of Charleston, S. C., said in the first interview with any of the 17 survivors brought here by the rescue ship Del Norte that the under-sea boat or boats fired only one torpedo.

Brazilian port authorities who boarded the Del Norte earlier said they were told the ship was shelled as she sank.

The port authorities boarded the rescue ship Del Norte for routine inspection while United States embassy and naval officials took depositions from the 17 survivors aboard.

H. W. Ackerman, 19, of Charleston, S. C., one of the survivors, said the three men missing from the tanker's crew of 37 "almost surely drowned."

Ackerman identified the three as a boatswain named Rankin, an able seaman and an oiler.

One or Two Submarines
In the first interview by any of the survivors, the young Charlestonian declared the tanker, which sailed under the flag of Panama, was attacked by "certainly one and perhaps two" submarines 600 miles off Brazil during the dark, moonless night of September 27-28.

"I was asleep when a torpedo hit square amidship about 12:15 a. m.," said Ackerman, who was employed in the officer's mess. "So were most of the other members of the crew except a group of nine playing poker in the crew's mess."

"But we got topside in less than five minutes and had two boats overside with 17 men in each in less than 10 minutes."

"Three who reached the boat deck too late—a boatswain named Rankin, an able seaman and an oiler—jumped overboard and disappeared almost immediately."

"We stood off from the I. C. White for four hours until she went down by the stern, rowing around her, but did not find the missing three."

Ackerman said the lifeboats were launched hastily because of fear that the torpedo explosion would set fire to the oil laden vessel.

No Warning Given
There was not the slightest warning of the torpedo attack, he declared.

Ackerman said the submarine dived immediately after the torpedo struck, and just before the I. C. White's lifeboats were launched.

"We saw two lights clearly," he added, "and some of the crew members believe there were two submarines."

Ackerman said the lifeboat in which he and 16 others finally pulled away was at sea seven days.

"We were rowing steadily westward," he said. "Finally, on the night of October 3, when we were about ten miles off the Brazilian coast we picked up the lights of the Del Norte. We fired four rockets from a portable gun and she changed course, came to the rescue and took us aboard."

United States officials planned to take depositions of all survivors before cabling a summary to the State Department at Washington.

Violent Battle Rages on Moscow Front; Rebellion Spreads in Occupied Areas

British Are Gathering Evidence Against Nazis for Slaughters

(By The Associated Press)
Adolf Hitler's high command claimed victory over the Russians today in a great new battle in the Ukraine, north of the Sea of Azov, but London military quarters reported that the Germans had been checked with severe losses and that guns of the Soviet Black Sea fleet were heavily pounding the invaders.

Front-line dispatches to Red Star, the Soviet army newspaper, reported a violent battle was raging on the central (Moscow) front, with Marshal Semyon Timoshenko's troops striking fierce blows against German armored wedges driven into the Russian lines.

Soviet infantry, supported by tanks and aviation, were reported to have attacked heavy German troop concentrations immediately after a long march, destroying 198 tanks and killing more than 1,000 Nazis in three sectors.

Red Star said a Soviet tank battalion ambushed a Nazi tank column southeast of Kiev, the German-held Ukraine capital, and smashed seven tanks. Bloody German losses were reported here, as well.

On the northern front, the Red army announced that Leningrad's defense guns had smashed 19 German earth-and-timber forts on the approaches to the old czarist capital, silenced two artillery batteries and put other Nazi siege weapons out of action.

Masses of German troops were said to have been dispersed by Soviet fire.

Germany's bitter war to stamp out revolt in the conquered nations by firing-squad, hangman and guillotine brought six more executions—and one suspended death sentence.

But rebellion continued to spread.

German press dispatches acknowledged that Nazi troops and two companies of Croatian Ustachas had been required to smash a putsch led by an attorney's daughter in the West Serbian town of Sabac, in old Yugoslavia.

Serb rebels had stormed the town, these dispatches said, far outnumbering the German garrison which "offered heroic resistance" until rescued by Nazi reinforcements.

Bands of Chetniks (guerrilla fighters) and armed peasants took part in the attack on the town, which lies only 40 miles west of Belgrade, the former Yugoslav capital, the Germans said.

Simultaneously, the British government announced it was collecting evidence against Germans responsible for murder, oppression and cruelty to hostages and others in Nazi-occupied territories.

Richard K. Law, undersecretary for foreign affairs, told Parliament that the government was considering the subject of punishment for such individuals—presumably after the war.

German authorities announced the 73rd execution in occupied

U. S. Warplane Production Should Reach 2,500 Monthly

Plant Output Will Surpass O. P. M.'s Estimate of 18,000; Record Was Set in 30 Days

Washington, Oct. 7 (AP)—United States warplane production should reach 2,500 military craft monthly by the end of 1941, a responsible defense production official said today.

September's new high of 1914 delivered military planes—including training as well as combat types—was not a chance production spurt, Office of Production Management officials said, but a token that the nation's plane producers have reached their objective of sustained, increasing quantity production.

"We are definitely over the hump," an O.P.M. aircraft spokesman said. "I see no reason why 2,500 military planes a month should not be produced by the end of the year."

Even if output in October, November and December should not surpass but merely equal September deliveries, it was noted, the year's production would total 18,393 planes. That figure compares with the estimate of 18,000 given in February by William S. Knudsen, O.P.M. director-general.

Frankly jubilant over the progress, O.P.M. officials pointed out that the record was set in a 30-day month, with work interrupted by the Labor Day holiday.

It was accomplished, moreover, in spite of increased emphasis on heavy long-range bombers, requested by the British in ever-increasing numbers. O.P.M. officials had feared that the 500-bombers-a-month program called for by President Roosevelt in May would impede the over-all production rate.

Britain reportedly has been receiving 75 per cent of United States combat plane output.

Telegram for Stalin
Nashville, Tenn., Oct. 7 (AP)—Russia's Premier Joseph Stalin today was sent this cablegram: "National Prophecy Prayer Conference in session in Nashville stands ready to send 1,000 Russian language Bibles to you for distribution. Members of the executive committee of the conference, which has attracted delegates from several states, said the message was sent "because millions of Russian Christians have been persecuted and driven into exile for their faith."

Steel Bridge Falls Into Soo Canal, 2 Trainmen Killed

Authorities Discount Idea of Sabotage, Since Big Span Was Guarded; Ships Delayed

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Oct. 7 (AP)—A steel railway bridge collapsed today beneath a freight train, blocking waters adjacent to the famous Sault Ste. Marie Canal and locks—the world's busiest shipway through which passes ore for the steel of defense factories.

Two trainmen were killed when the locomotive of the southbound train of more than 40 cars plunged downward and dragged two cars with it.

Suspensions of sabotage were discounted by authorities inasmuch as the bridge has been under guard of Fort Brady troops during the defense emergency.

Soldiers at the fort were routed out of barracks and extra guards posted at the bridge which is just above the great Soo locks. Numerous vessels were forced to anchor in the river for an indefinite period.

Huge Task Lies Ahead
Railway men and military authorities prepared at once to begin the tremendous task of raising the locomotive and the two cars out of the river so that vessel traffic could resume.

It would first be necessary to cut portions of the broken 165-foot span apart in order to free the other span of similar size.

Rain was falling as the freight train—40 to 50 cars loaded with paper from the mills of Canada, pulpwood, steel rails and miscellaneous freight—proceeded out on to the bridge. Suddenly, said Bridge Tender Albert Penman, the north span started sagging.

"Then it went down, slowly," Penman said. "I stood there watching it. The locomotive went with it. Two of the fellows crawled up the bridge."

Child Lost 8 Days In Wilderness Is Found by Group

Conway, N. H., Oct. 7 (AP)—Found alive when she had been given up for dead, five-year-old Pamela Hollingworth appeared in good physical condition except for frostbitten toes today after wandering alone for eight days without food in a wilderness.

The curly-haired child, weighing 45 pounds when she vanished from a family picnic September 28, was eight pounds lighter when amazed searchers heard her shout "Hi" just before dusk fell last night.

Veteran woodsmen and medical men termed her survival even more surprising than that of Donn Fendler, Rye, N. Y., Boy Scout found alive after similarly being lost eight days in the Mt. Katahdin region of Maine two years ago.

The girl, they pointed out, was seven years younger, lacked the Boy Scout's woodlore, and she encountered temperatures as low as 22 degrees at one period and driving rain at another.

Her shoulders and back exposed, the girl wore tattered green overalls and red sneakers when a group of C.C.C. boys led by Foreman William Matson heard her shout and found her reclining beneath a log.

Tornado Kills 3, 135 Are Injured In Kansas City

Also Hits Suburban Area and Strikes Finally at Community 10 Miles From City

Kansas City, Oct. 7 (AP)—A furious tornado, the second destructive storm to batter Kansas City in six weeks, ripped through the eastern edge of the city and suburban communities in the Blue river valley last night leaving three persons dead and at least 135 injured.

Fifty-five victims were hospitalized and 80 others treated. The storm first hit near 43rd street and Kensington avenue in Kansas City, moved northeast through Fairmount and several smaller communities, and struck last in Sugar Creek, nearly 10 miles from its point of origin.

Fairmount, between Kansas City and Independence, Mo., took the brunt. Hundreds of homes were destroyed and many industrial plants along the Blue river were damaged or destroyed. No

Attorney General's Letter Says Procedure Is Not Proper in Calling Board Sessions

The usual pyrotechnics accompanied the October meeting of the town board of the town of Rosendale last evening and there was a good-sized crowd in attendance. During the meeting there were the usual heated words and charges of "attempts to fool the public just before election" and also an allegation that meetings of the town board for the past five years have been held illegally.

Present at the meeting were Supervisor John J. Mooney, Town Clerk Mrs. Anna Auchmoody, and Justices George McAvoy, Charles Zaengle and Edward Brodsky. Welfare Officer Thomas Ferrell and Town Superintendent of Highways A. P. Trandle also were in attendance. The only absent member of the town board was Justice Aldridge.

Supervisor Mooney attacked the meeting which was held on Tuesday evening following Labor Day when three justices met and transacted monthly business. He said that such a meeting was illegal since no written notice had been given him. Bills which had been audited at that meeting were later presented for audit by Supervisor Mooney but they were refused audit when Justice Brodsky said they had been audited at a prior meeting. Supervisor Mooney held the bills.

Bills Bring Flurry
It was the offer of the bills which brought forth the first real heated argument of the evening.

Justice Brodsky objected to the calling of a meeting on Labor Day, saying that no one ever heard of holding a public meeting on a legal holiday and he said members of the town board were justified in not attending. This meeting on Labor Day was attended by Supervisor Mooney and one other member who waited for the arrival of a quorum and finally left without transacting business.

Next evening the three justices met and transacted business. Justice Brodsky said that when a regular meeting night fell upon a holiday the meeting was postponed to the next evening and he held that business transacted

Adolf Hitler Might Make Stalemate Of War and Become Master of Europe

By DEWITT MACKENZIE (Freeman Special News Service)

Hitler's great new offensive operations against the Russians, which the Nazis claim "are of such strategic magnitude that they exceed everything else achieved in the eastern campaign," tend to lend substance to the report that he figures on making a peace offer to Britain before long.

The story cropped up this time in Cairo and it's now said that the United States is to be included in the proposal.

Briefly the idea is that the fuhrer expects to knock Russia out of the war before the end of the year. Thus, being lord of all continental Europe and the treasures thereof, he will quit bothering about making assaults on Al-

Secretary Speaks

P.-T. A. National Official Outlines Duties to Be Shared in Crisis

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 7 (AP)—The problem of making "the democratic spirit prevail in these days of hostility and uncertainty" falls to the schools, home and parents," the New York State Parent-Teacher Congress heard today.

It is hardly necessary "to argue the importance of the place of the home in a program of complete national defense," Mrs. Charles D. Center, College Park, Ga., national secretary, told the organization's 45th annual convention in a prepared address.

"Whatever lies ahead for America," she said, "whether it be times of ease or difficulty, of peace or war, our country will always need citizens who understand the ethical ideals of democracy, who are skillful in the application of these ideals and who are intelligently loyal to them."

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

Noise Proof
New York.—The clicking noise made by false teeth when the wearer is eating has been soundproofed.

Dr. Irving R. Hardy, Columbia University Dental School, said the soundproofing is done with teeth made of one of the newer resins, called an acrylic, and a near relative of synthetic rubber.

This resin simply doesn't click.

Close to Home
Upper Darby, Pa.—Township Treasurer V. Erwin Bond parked his car across the street from his office, which is in the same building with the police station.

A couple of hours later he asked officers to give him a lift home in a cruiser car. His had been stolen.

Saturday Night Skit
Center, Tex.—Camp Bowie soldiers, en route home from maneuvers, bathed en masse in a creek near Logansport, La. They used so much soap the Logansport Lumber Company's sawmill had to shut down. The mill boiler got full of soap and the management was afraid there might be an explosion.

Hot Campaign
Bingham, Utah.—Eugene Morris will have his name on the ballot for re-election as county recorder only once, but he isn't worrying.

He entered as candidate for the Non-Partisan, the Labor and the People's parties. The attorney general said nothing doing, so the People's party folded, the Labor party decided to enter no candidate, leaving only Candidate Morris of the Non-Partisan party.

That Makes It Clear
Chicago.—Edward Eneigh of Chicago, reading about George Hopkins' landing on Devil's Tower, got to wondering how two acres would compare with two city blocks.

"I don't know how many city blocks it would be," said a girl in his office, a recent arrival from Oklahoma, "but it would be equal to 10 rows of cotton back home."

The Golden Gignacs
Chicago.—When Alfred Gignac, 76, and his wife, aged 71, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary, two brothers and sisters-in-law who have passed that mark were among the guests.

Uldrich Gignac, 85, and his wife will observe their 60th anniversary November 15. Cloris, 83, and his wife have been married 54 years.

Africa Fights Fever
To combat yellow fever if it appears, the authorities in Eastern Africa are making large-scale preparations. In a recent outbreak of the fever in the Nuba Mountains of the Sudan more than 1,600 deaths resulted among 15,000 known cases, it is reported at Entebbe, Uganda. Plans were made at a conference called by Brigadier A. J. Orenstein, who is South African director of medical services with the Forces in East Africa, Dr. Orenstein, as a young man, was closely associated with W. C. Gorgas, surgeon-general of the United States army, in stamping out yellow fever in the Panama Canal area.

Beef Powder Tested
Beef reduced to a concentrated powder is standing severe tests in Australia, where it was invented. J. B. Cramsie, former chairman of the Australian Meat Council, said in Sydney it may be the answer to Britain's meat shortage. Beef powder does not need refrigeration and would take only a fraction of the cargo space which its own food equivalent in carcass meat would occupy. In one test a can of powdered meat six years old was in perfect condition.

It's a Wonderful Age
Big Island, Va. (AP)—Even the chickens are taking this defense business seriously. Mrs. J. E. Hanley killed a chicken, cut open the gizzard, and found seven .22 calibre cartridges.

Fire Prevention

Private fire brigades, long an arm of industry and of some institutions in protecting themselves from fire, gain new importance in the civilian defense program of the community, Fire Chief Joseph L. Murphy stated today.

"Fire Prevention Week affords an opportunity to take practical advantage of the value of private brigades by organizing more of them in occupancies where they are necessary but do not now exist," the chief explained. "The emergency makes it clear that all buildings where groups of people live or are employed need this form of protection. And now that plans are being made for defense against invasion from the air, these private brigades become vital assets in the civilian defense program."

The fire department obviously can not maintain, at public expense, firemen in all the larger buildings to act as soon as a fire emergency occurs. The private brigade does exactly that. It puts trained men on the scene of a fire with very little delay, and because these men are entirely familiar with the hazards involved as the result of their training, they can act effectively.

"It is my opinion that every industrial shop or factory, every mercantile establishment, every apartment house, public building, hotel or hospital where a number of persons are employed or live, should have private protection. Maintenance workers can be trained to handle the special hazards involved. Armed with fire extinguishers, backed up by sprinklers and other automatic equipment, they can put out incipient fires before they spread destruction. They also will know how and when to summon the fire department. Private brigades help eliminate the element of chance and accidents from fire protection," he concluded.

Men Plead Innocent

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 6 (AP)—Two men arrested by U. S. customs officials on charges of attempting to smuggle about $10,000 worth of gold bars into the United States from Canada pleaded innocent today when arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Boyce H. Butterfield. The commissioner said the men were returned to jail in default of $20,000 bail each pending a hearing October 17.

Seven More Areas To Receive Benefit Of Game Control

Other counties in New York state will have "controlled" public hunting areas similar to that in Ulster county near New Paltz, it was announced today by the Associated Press.

The areas will grow to 115,200 acres with the addition of more than 74,000 acres in seven counties when the upland game season opens October 20.

This system established in 1939 and now operating in Ulster, Seneca, Orange, Steuben, Niagara and Monroe counties, will be extended to Madison, Schoharie, Putnam, Cayuga, Livingston, Wyoming and Columbia counties.

The conservation department says the plan features landowner-sportsmen co-operation in opening land open strictly posted and is intended to provide better management sport and full safeguards for property owners.

An estimated 5,000 acres is posted as a "controlled" area near New Paltz and the region is stocked with pheasants and cotton tail rabbits.

Two stations for registering and checking out are conveniently situated on the tract. Slips are given out as the hunters register and cards filled out by the hunters as they leave after hunting in the region. The parking of cars is also restricted to certain designated areas on the tract.

Protected areas around properties and farm houses are marked by cards in one of three colors used in the region. Cards in another color mark the open areas and others in a third color designate the boundaries of the "controlled" areas.

The state contributes a slight sum for each acre in the "controlled" areas.

Millstone Marks Grave
Bluefield, Va. (AP)—John David Denny was a miller, as his forebears had been for generations, and he was proud of it. So he arranged to carry his vocation with him to the grave. A millstone he used for many years at Elk Garden was properly inscribed here and sent to mark Denny's grave at Saltville, Va.

Dates Are Listed For Local Voters' Test in Literacy

Superintendent of Schools Gives Rules and Data of Election Ruling Passed in 1921

Thursday is the first of several days set aside by the local Board of Education for the taking of literacy tests, it was announced today by Superintendent of Schools Arthur J. Laidlaw. All voters who are not eligible to vote without the test are asked to take the test at the earliest possible date.

The following is the statement issued by Superintendent Laidlaw: "At the general election in 1921 an amendment to article II, section I, of the State Constitution was passed which provides: 'After January 1, 1922, no person shall become entitled to vote by attaining majority, by naturalization or otherwise, unless such person is also able, except for physical disability, to read and write English, and suitable laws shall be passed by the Legislature to enforce this provision.' The former test of reading an abstract from the constitution of this state given by the election inspector, is abolished.

The general qualifications of voters are as follows:

- Voter must have been a citizen for 90 days.
- Voter must be 21 years of age or more.
- Voter must have lived 5 years in the United States.
- Voter must have lived 1 year in the state.
- Voter must have lived 4 months in the county.
- Voter must have lived 30 days in the election district.
- Voter must possess evidence of literacy if a new voter.

The qualifications as to time must exist as of the day of election.

Evidence of Literacy

The evidence of literacy which all voters must present to the election inspectors is one of the following:

1. A diploma from an eighth grade elementary school in which English has been the language of instruction, or of a higher school.
2. A certificate of literacy issued by the school authorities under the rules and regulations of the Regents.

Certificates of literacy can be issued without examination under the following conditions, viz.: "To new voters who can present evidence of having completed the work prescribed for the sixth grade of the public day schools of the state, or its equivalent in night school." Such applicant should be particular to secure from the principal of his school a certificate stating the grade completed. Such procedure will save time both for the voter and the examiner. New voters who cannot furnish such a certificate must take the New York State Regents Literacy Test.

An amendment voted by the 1936 Legislature provides that the certificate of literacy, when issued, shall be in duplicate. One copy may be retained by the person to whom it is issued and the other by the election inspectors to be transmitted to the board of elections for the county. This amendment will provide a check for election inspectors to see that the same person who took the literacy test signs the registration book.

Pursuant to the rules of the Board of Regents, the literacy test for the city of Kingston will be given at the high school and at the Myron J. Michael School on the following dates by Principal Frank L. Meagher:

- High school, Broadway, October 9, 7 p. m. to 10 p. m.
- Myron J. Michael School, Andrew street, October 10-17, 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.
- High school, Broadway, October 10-17, 4 p. m. to 10 p. m.
- High school, Broadway, October 11, 10 a. m. to 10 p. m.
- High school, Broadway, October 18, 7 p. m. to 10 p. m.

Pertinent Facts On Conscription

Enlisted men who were in the registration age bracket on October 16, 1940, or July 1, 1941, and who have not already registered under the Selective Training and Service Act must register when discharged from the armed forces, Brigadier General Ames T. Brown, New York state director of Selective Service, stated today.

Although members of the regular military establishment are relieved from registration as long as they are in service, the general said, they must register when they are discharged from the armed forces. He also explained the difference between "release" and "discharge" from the army.

He said: "When a man is released from active duty he automatically becomes a member of the reserve and it is not necessary for him to register under Selective Service. On the other hand, if he is discharged he is not a member of the reserve and is required to register if he was within the age group for selectees on either of the two registration days.

"While the majority of such ex-service men probably are not liable for induction as selectees, men who are discharged from the regular army after completing only one year of training are liable for induction under the Selective Service law."

The Selective Training and Service Act of 1940, as amended, relieves from liability for peacetime training and service under the act only those regulars who have satisfactorily served as an officer or enlisted man for at least three consecutive years in the regular army, navy, marine corps, or coast guard, or any enlisted man honorably discharged from the regular army or the coast guard, for the convenience of the government, within six months prior to the completion of his regular three-year period of enlistment.

Also relieved from peacetime training and service are former members of the active national guard who have satisfactorily served for at least one year in active federal service in the regular army and subsequent thereto for at least two consecutive years in the regular army or in the active national guard; and also, men who were in the active national guard on registration day and have served satisfactorily for at least six consecutive years.

Those one-year ex-service regulars who are liable for further military training may enlist for three years in the national guard of New York, if they are residents of this state, or join the enlisted reserve corps, General Brown said.

Selectees who are relieved from active duty with the army are transferred to the reserve as provided by law and will be classified by their local boards as being members of the military establishment. Although they are not liable for additional service as selectees after completion of their period of training and relief from active service, they may be called to active duty as members of the reserve.

We, the People, Think...

It isn't what any one man thinks that runs a Democracy. This country is governed by what we, the people, think. What we think is based on what we hear and what we read. It's INFORMATION that gives us the power to run our Democracy.

Here are Congressmen A and B. A says we're in the War, whether it's been declared or not. He thinks we ought to send an A. E. F. to Europe tomorrow. B says we're NOT in the War. He thinks it isn't our war and we ought never to get in it.

Here's the American citizen: He knows what Congressman A believes and what Congressman B believes. He has read BOTH SIDES in the newspaper. He's ready to form his OWN opinion and say to the Congressmen: "This is our policy. This is what we're going to do!"

The citizens of a Democracy are the governors of Democracy. But to govern, they must know FACTS. It is the job of the newspapers to supply the facts that enable the citizens to run their government. That's why a free press is vital to Democracy.

Here are Grocer A and Grocer B. Grocer A wants to sell Red Can peaches for 10 cents, because they're better than Blue Can peaches, even though they cost more. Grocer B wants to sell Blue Can peaches, because even if they're not quite so good as Red Can peaches, they cost less.

Here's Mrs. American Citizen, shopping by reading newspaper ads. She reads what Grocer A and Grocer B say. Then she makes up her mind to buy Red Can peaches or Blue Can peaches. The ads give her the FACTS that enable her to form her own opinion... get the most value for her money. No one can FORCE her to buy!

So the American newspaper does its job on two fronts. It presents NEWS facts that make Democracy work in government—presents advertising facts that make Democracy work in business.

If you have any doubt that American newspapers do these things, just look at the dictator nations where the people lost, first, their right to know what was actually going on; second, the right to govern themselves. And they GAINED only the right to stand in line to buy what the "State" decreed they should have.

A letter from those of you who share our views will hearten us. A letter from those of you who disagree will chasten us. And newspapers, if they are to serve you well, need both the heartening and the chastening of an alert readership. Address the publisher of this newspaper.

PULASKI AND COLUMBUS

On two dates this month Americans who are conscious of their national history will pause to honor two "aliens" who contributed much to it. Columbus Day, October 12, commemorates the day in 1492 when the Italian navigator who was looking for the Indies sighted a small speck of land in the Western Hemisphere—unknown to Europe before that time. His discovery did more than stimulate exploration and commerce. It opened a New World where vigorous lovers of freedom were able to develop, practice and defend their ideas of human liberty and justice. Those ideas flourished here and are today the hope and inspiration of the Old World.

Casimir Pulaski is the other man we should honor this month. October 11 is the anniversary of his death from wounds received in the battle of Savannah. The young Polish soldier, born in Podolia, was one of the real heroes of the American Revolutionary War. He had fought in vain for Polish freedom before he joined the American cause. But apparently he believed that the battle for freedom was worldwide and that it would be advanced by the achievement of freedom anywhere.

At any rate, he came to America and fought so valiantly for American independence that Congress made him commander of a brigade of cavalry and, later, authorized a monument in his honor. President Roosevelt has called for a national memorial day for Pulaski. This is an excellent time to recall his service to our country and to mankind.

FARM VALUES

According to the Farm Credit Administration there has been a sharp rise in sales of farms. Applications for loans to buy farms increased 50 per cent in some states in the first half of this year. Gains in the dollar volume of such sales—or purchases—were 85 per cent above the same period in 1940.

Farms have long suffered from depressed values. There have been years with virtually no sales, or sales only at deflated values. The present activity is therefore considered wholesome.

The governor of F. C. A. sounds a note of warning, however. A runaway inflation of farm values is as bad as any other type of inflation. This country is close enough to the World War boom in land values and the subsequent collapse and widespread farm bankruptcy to profit by the lessons of that period. The F. C. A. warns buyers and lending agencies alike to be cautious. Loans should be made on "normal values," not on speculative hopes. If we can manage to be so wise there will be no extreme inflation with its disastrous aftermath.

PEOPLE WITHOUT COLDS

Taking a long look ahead, scientists say that the common cold can be ended in the United States. It will be another instance of prevention rather than cure. And it will cost a good deal of money—though less than a war.

Experiments are said to have shown that colds do not spread when indoor air is purified. There is supposed to be no danger in outdoor air because, although the germs are present, they are reduced in number far below the danger point. It is indoors that they multiply and their effectiveness is strengthened by other factors.

The method for stopping the common cold is therefore simply to purify all indoor air enough to prevent the spread of its germs. Use of ultra-violet light will do the job. Homes, schools, stores, offices, churches, theatres, public conveyances, factories and subways would all have to be so air-conditioned.

At the moment, such an accomplishment looks almost impossible. It would require not only great outlays of money, but great educational efforts to persuade the public to insist on it and to open the way for it by enforceable legislation. But as a preview of something which may be brought about in the future almost any open-minded person today will find it easy to accept.

If we live through this era, we'll know a lot more than we do now.

'Nother Greek insurrection. You can't keep the Greeks down—they're always raising Hellas.

HELPED BY GLAND EXTRACT

Until recent years women of middle age approaching, and during, the menopause or change of life, suffered with hot flushes, indigestion, nervousness even to the extent that the brain was affected and care in an institution became necessary. Today, thanks to the use of extract of ovary, most of these symptoms can be controlled, because it is the wasting away of the ovaries at this age that causes the symptoms.

Similarly many men past middle age or approaching old age suffer with symptoms due to the wasting of male glands. The first symptom noticed is that the individual finds that he must get up during the night to pass his urine, although there does not seem to be the desire to pass urine more often during the day. At first, he gets up only once during the night but as the prostate gland, which surrounds neck of bladder, enlarges, it means that less urine than formerly creates the desire to pass urine.

A later symptom is finding it difficult to pass the urine due to the obstruction caused by the enlarged prostate gland. It is because of this difficulty that most patients consult their physician.

A little later the muscles of the bladder lose their tone and the obstruction is increased.

Many men put up with these symptoms and do nothing about it unless complete obstruction occurs or they are afflicted with backache, shortness of breath, dizziness, sleeplessness or other symptoms which occur with enlarged prostate gland.

In discussing the treatment of this disturbance, Dr. I. G. Duncan, Memphis, Tenn., in the Southern Medicine Journal, suggests building up the general health by regulating the patient's habits, hours and diet, massaging of prostate, and weekly injections of the male gland. It is the injection of this gland substance—testosterone propionate—that is helping so many of these cases, just as injections or the taking by mouth, of ovary extract is helping women.

Washington Daybook

By Jack Stinnett

(Second of two articles about the automobile situation.)

Washington—The big decrease in automobile production is going to send people to the used car lots who never have been there before.

The demand that is expected to develop for used cars may sharpen the practices of those dishonest dealers which fringe the second-hand business.

There are, in Washington, two national agencies which have made a study of the used car trade and the dishonesties which some resort to in putting over a deal. There is almost no limit to trickery and no rules that could guarantee every buyer against being gyped.

There are, however, a few rules which if followed cut your chances of getting stung. Here they are as they were given to me by these same agencies:

No car should be bought without a road test, and "road test" doesn't mean a drive around the block. The car should be driven far enough (50 to 100 miles) to get really hot, and to test the consumption of oil and gas. Start with both gas and oil at "full." Drive through traffic and open country, over hills and rough roads. If the car is a gas eater or a oil hog, trouble already has started.

If a cold engine starts with a slapping noise and quiet down, the pistons are loose. If it idles excessively fast, it is possible that the motor has been "revved up" to cover mechanical irregularities.

Doctored Motors

A clutch that grabs on a speed-up is in bad shape. Brakes should be tested on a brake machine, but if none is available, make "slam" stops at from 25 or 30 miles an hour, and examination of skid marks will tell most of the story.

When the car is hot, put it up to the limit allowed by law and then take your foot off the accelerator and let the car "push" the engine until you have dropped to about 20 miles an hour. Then step hard on the accelerator. If blue smoke comes out of the exhaust it indicates worn pistons, rings and cylinder walls. If the smoke changes from blue to black as you gain speed, the carburetor mixture is too rich, a stunt sometimes resorted to by sharp dealers to soften the explosions and hide engine noises. A clattering noise during this speed-up indicates loose connecting rods, and a heavy thumping may mean a loose main bearing or fly wheel.

Watch your step on guarantees. A "money back guarantee" has been known to mean simply a credit on a more expensive car and maybe a bigger gyp. "New car guarantees" literally cover only defects in workmanship and materials and have nothing to do with worn parts or defects developed by abuse.

Go over your time payment or even cash contracts and make sure the title is good. If you have done all that, say my informants, and are as sharp as a tack to boot, you probably will get what you paid for, whether it's a $50 puddle-jumper or a latest model that had rolled only a thousand miles before its owner up and died.

Tires Tell A Story

Don't go by speedometers as an assurance of mileage. Examine the wear on the break, clutch and accelerator pedals and on the tires. A car with several makes of tires in various stages of wear probably has been out 20,000 miles or more. An appraisal of the tires by a good tire man might tell a lot.

Check the battery by using the starter and horn while the lights are on. If they go very dim, the battery probably is in bad order. Many of these things could be corrected by a competent mechanic. That's up to your horse-trading ability.

Justice Brandeis Lived to Know the Nation's Estimate of Him Was One of Vindication and Reverence

(By DAVID LAWRENCE)

Washington, Oct. 7.—Brandeis the liberal has gone. Fifty years of American history marched with him. Around his activities stormed controversy after controversy. His opponents fought him bitterly but he lived to see their fears disproved and to know that the nation's estimate of him was one of vindication and reverence.

For Louis Brandeis never pulled his punches, or sought the paths of expediency. Versed in railroad economics, he startled the financial world with his charges of inefficiency and waste in the old New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad. He startled the political world when as a progressive Republican he announced his support of Woodrow Wilson, Democratic nominee for the presidency in 1912. He startled labor when, from the ranks of labor itself, whose attorney he had been, he said some plain spoken words about the need for responsibility in the management of labor unions.

When Mr. Wilson was elected president the first time he wanted Louis Brandeis for his cabinet as either attorney general or secretary of commerce. From Boston came a hue and cry. Mr. Wilson listened to the objections and lived to regret that decision. It was the motivating influence in his subsequent selection of Brandeis to go on the Supreme Court of the United States. Again a storm of opposition arose. The battle in the Senate was historic, but Mr. Wilson stood his ground and insisted on confirmation.

The business and financial world too, lived to regret their opposition. For liberal though he was, Brandeis was not a confiscationist. The railroads came to be glad that a man of his knowledge of railroad finance and economics was on the high court. His decisions on matters of property were by no means as radical as had been feared by the conservatives. He became one of the foremost liberal jurists of American history. Along with Oliver Wendell Holmes, his liberal dissents are notable for their human philosophy and eminent desire to befriend the underprivileged.

The respect which he had for American institutions was boundless. He never allowed his personal friendships or political radicalism to befog his judgment. When institutions were at stake, though supporting the constitutionalism of much New Deal legislation, he joined with his eight other colleagues in denouncing the N.R.A. as an improper delegation of power by Congress. Similarly he concurred with the eight other justices in telling President Roosevelt that he had usurped

"AT CENTURY'S TURN"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

The Rev. P. C. Weyant, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church on Wurts street, delivered the baccalaureate address at the annual commencement exercises of the Kingston High School held in June, 1921. That year the school was celebrating the graduation of the largest class in its history. The class numbered 94.

In the last few years the number of graduates has more than doubled.

I also recall that on June 23, 1921, Superintendent John E. Mahar of the Kingston office of the Prudential Insurance Company, was the guest of honor at a banquet of the Kingston district agents at Pessner's West Shore Hotel here. The banquet was to commemorate Mr. Mahar's 15 years of service in charge of the local office. Mr. Mahar first came to Kingston to have charge of the local office in May, 1906.

During the years that he was in Kingston, Mr. Mahar was very active in the civic and fraternal life of the city, and for a number of years during the Cantel administration, he served as a member of the board of Health.

It is also interesting to recall that the Schilling Furniture Company located in Kingston in July, 1920, in the old Kingston Woodworking Company plant near Flatbush avenue, where the plant continued in operation for a number of years, turning out high grade furniture.

In June, 1922, it was announced that the Rev. Dr. Remsen DuBois Bird, a graduate of old Ulster Academy, had been appointed president of the Occidental College in Los Angeles, Calif.

Dr. Bird when a young man resided with Mr. and Mrs. Remsen B. DuBois on West Pierpont street, and was a member of the Rondout Presbyterian Church.

Several requests have been received from older readers as to the date on which the old Academy of Music was destroyed by fire. The fire occurred on June 11, 1901. The old academy was located on East O'Reilly street, and for years was used for various purposes.

Many older readers will recall that President Theodore Roosevelt while a candidate for the highest office in the nation, spoke at a Republican rally in the academy.

Many shows were also given, and during the days of the old Powell, Smith cigar factory, which later became the American Cigar factory, the employees of the Powell, Smith plant were tendered a New Year's Eve party with dancing and plenty of refreshments.

The other day I ran across an old clipping which recalled that the first commercial auto truck to be used in Kingston was the one delivered to the old Hauck Brewing Company on June 12, 1911.

Today practically every business house in the city has a fleet of trucks.

More than half the farmers in the United States (50.6 per cent) were full owners of their farms in 1940 according to the Census. . .

Air Mail the Hard Way

Thermopolis, Wyo. (AP) — Ed Walsh was hunting near Monet, 15 miles from the nearest road, when he saw an unopened letter in a clump of sagebrush. Picking it up, he was startled to read the name and address of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Caroline Fuller of Bonneville, Wyo. The letter was postmarked in Missouri and was dated May 12, 1939. Walsh believes it must have blown away when it was being unloaded with other mail at Bonneville, more than 60 miles away.

Trio Is Fined
Richard Banks, 19, and William Banks, 21, both of 33 Boulder avenue and Edward Delavan, 21, of Lucas avenue were fined $5 each last evening when arraigned before Justice of the Peace Tiller of the town of Hurley. The trio was charged with petit larceny for the taking of a stove from the Walton property. Delavan was also charged with operating a car without a license and was fined $5 on that charge. The arrests were made by Deputy Sheriff Ray Winne following a complaint from the Walton Grove farm telling the sheriff that three men had driven up in a Ford coupe and removed the stove. All three fines were paid.

Six Per Cent on Telephone Bills

Tax on Monthly Local Service Charge in Force

When telephone bills are received, within the next day or two, customers will get another reminder that the country is going all out for defense. The reminder will be in the form of a six per cent tax on the monthly local service charge, plus increased taxes for out-of-town calls.

Thus, a telephone customer in Kingston, who has an individual line residence telephone for which he pays a monthly local service charge of $3.50, will pay a tax of $21 each month from now on as long as the Revenue Act of 1941 is in force.

A new tax of six per cent is also imposed on out-of-town calls where the charge is less than 25 cents. This tax also applies to report charges of any amount. This tax will be computed by adding all such charges together and the tax shown as one item for the total.

Out-of-town calls costing 25 cents or more are subject to an increased tax on and after October 1. The new tax is five cents on messages costing from 25 to 50 cents inclusive and five cents on each additional charge of 50 cents, with no maximum limit. This is an increase from the former tax which was 10 cents on charges from 50 to 99 cents, inclusive, 15 cents from $1 to $1.99, inclusive, and 20 cents on $2 and over.

Other taxes which will affect some bills include a 10 per cent tax on telegrams, radiograms and cablegrams as well as certain taxes on various leased wire facilities and special services, such as the lines and foreign exchange lines. A tax does not apply to directory services and in most instances does not apply to installation, move and similar charges.

Girls Scouts to Meet

The Girl Scout Troop 22 of Temple Emanuel will meet this evening. It is urged that all girls attend this important meeting.

Man Found Dead On Friend's Farm

Carlos Balbiera, 60, Dies of Heart Attack

Two hours after he had been reported missing by members of his family, Carlos Balbiera, 60, of Astoria, L. I., was found dead in a vineyard on the farm of Frank Tantillo two miles north of Highland on Saturday night. He had suffered a heart attack according to a medical examiner's report.

Mr. Balbiera had arrived on the Tantillo farm earlier in the afternoon with his wife and other relatives for a week-end vacation.

Complaining of illness, he told his wife he was going for a walk. When he failed to return by supper time state police in Highland were notified and a search started. Rosendale's Town Meetings Held Illegal by Bennett on the Tuesday following Labor Day was legal.

Supervisor Mooney then read a letter from Attorney General Bennett which held that the meeting was not legal since no notice had been given in writing. The attorney general held that except for the annual meeting and the meeting held on the Thursday following election, which were provided for by law, notice should be given of town meetings.

Labels All Illegal
It was then stated that if notice had to be given of each monthly meeting, then all of the meetings for the past five years have been illegal.

When Supervisor Mooney offered the bills for audit the board refused to audit again the bills which had been audited the Tuesday following Labor Day and they were laid aside by Mrs. Mooney. Among the bills audited were those of the board members for telephones, Dr. L. G. Rymph's bills as health officer and welfare bills.

Miss Fannie Williams inquired whether the town board would again adopt the resolution of last year relative to the holding of the Telemark ski jumping contest again this winter. She said arrangements were being made to have the jump scheduled. The board again went on record as last year and renewed its resolution.

The matter of the town taking over a private road near LeFever Falls was taken up. Property owners on the road have all granted rights of way to the town except the Central Hudson which owns the old D. & H. canal property. This consent was to have been given. It was stated that the corporation desired to have the town take over all of the old canal since this would relieve the corporation of a drainage problem which now confronted it from time to time.

Mrs. Roelgen, a resident of the road, inquired whether the town might not expend some of the money which the property owners along the road had paid in taxes for roads and make temporary repairs to the road. She said the county superintendent of highways had informed her that if the board authorized it this could be done. It was held by the town board that no money could be spent on the road which was a private one, until it was taken over by the town.

It was at this point in the meeting that Justice Brodsky again injected the tinder for another flare-up. Judge Brodsky, producing a copy of the Rosendale paper which he took from a printed copy of the Board of Supervisor Proceedings which were marked "Comments of Supervisor John J. Mooney," asked on what authority Supervisor Mooney had published the report in the paper. He accused Supervisor Mooney of publishing a "false report" and said the supervisor had no authority to have the report published. He said the report was not correct and the report did not tally with the town abstract report as printed in the proceedings of the board. He demanded that Mr. Mooney have printed the report as contained in the Board of Supervisors Proceedings printed report.

Hits Report

Referring to the report as printed in the Rosendale paper, Brodsky said "that report is doctored up" and he said it was done to fool the people of the town just before election. He referred to certain items in the report and specifically to payments made as salary to the supervisor and members of the board. He said the report just published did not contain all of the moneys paid to Mr. Mooney and he referred to an item of $616 which he said had been paid Mooney, but did not appear in the report.

Mr. Mooney said the report was a correct one and he said it contained payments of 1939 bills which were paid in 1940. The rest of the payments would come in the 1941 report he said.

Brodsky then said Mr. Mooney had no right to print the report without the consent of the town board. To this Mooney replied he had brought the report to the meeting in September and when no one showed up for the meeting he had gone ahead and had it published. "I had the report and I did not intend to throw it in the basket," said Supervisor Mooney. Supervisor Mooney then offered to let Justice Brodsky have his supervisors abstract book to check the correctness of the report if he so desired.

'Pretty Foxy'
Brodsky ended the argument with the statement that Mooney was "pretty foxy" in publishing the report at this time.

Once again before the meeting went into executive session to consider welfare matters, there was a tilt between the supervisor and Justice Brodsky.

Brodsky intimated that he had requested Supervisor Mooney to call a meeting and the supervisor had refused to do so. "I know my town law," said Brodsky and he said that because Mooney refused to call a meeting when requested he could be removed from office.

Justices' manuals which were received on approval at $5 each were refused and ordered returned.

Miss Fannie Williams, after examining the published report of Supervisor Mooney as it appeared in the Rosendale paper asked whether there was some mistake in the figures since in one place town government costs were placed at $8,000 and in another place at $6,000. A search was made for the original copy of the report by the town clerk but after some searching it was concluded that the printer had made a mistake since the column of figures added up to the total of about $8,000.

The meeting then went into executive session.

Large Attendance Reported for City Evening Courses

If the interest shown on Monday night is a true index of interest, the night school this year should be successful, it was reported today. There is a good registration in all vocational classes for men and women, as well as in the commercial classes. There is still room for additional registrations in the class for garment machine operators however, it was stated.

In this class women are trained to take positions in the local industries. There has been a demand for a class in dressmaking, and this class will be started Wednesday evening.

The Americanization class has always been one of the most important parts of the evening school. Instruction is given in the American way of life, which includes history, government, preparation for citizenship, papers, as well as help in speaking and writing English. The Americanization class is also a great benefit to those who, though born in this country, wish to improve their English.

Courses are given in beginning reading, writing and spelling. These classes are carried on in a friendly and informal manner, and no one should hesitate to attend because of age.

In the past the night school classes have been held from 7:15 to 9:15 o'clock on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, a total of six hours per week. Last evening, by unanimous vote of those who had registered, the night school this year will be held on Monday and Wednesday evenings from 7 to 10 o'clock. This will give the same number of hours instruction, and it will be more convenient for the students. In the past it has been rather difficult to give up three consecutive evenings. The new plan for classes on Monday and Wednesday evenings will eliminate this difficulty. Classes will again meet Wednesday evening of this week, October 8, and any new applicants may register at that time.

Joe Gordon Is Honored

New York, Oct. 7 (AP)—Joe Gordon, the great second baseman of the New York Yankees, was chosen today by the baseball writers of nine New York papers as the finest player of the World Series. He was presented with a $150 hat, several sizes too large, by Acting Mayor Newbold Morris at a ceremony on the steps of city hall. Gordon's automobile was parked nearby and immediately after the ceremony the Yankee star, his wife and 14-year-old daughter, Judy, headed for their home in Oregon.

Troops Study Problems

Camden, S. C., Oct. 7 (AP)—Soldiers of the First Army, beginning a two-month period of maneuvers which will include a fortnight of intensive battle practice with all the latest weapons of war, returned today to the solution of military problems on a small scale. There was no promise of abatement in the sizzling heat which beset the troops yesterday.

K. of C. Committee Meeting Is Slated

General Committee to Iron Out Final Plans for Yearly Ball

A meeting of the general committee arranging the 23rd annual K. of C. Charity Ball will take place in the council's building this evening.

All indications point to a record crowd at the affair this year and the committee will meet tonight to iron out the little details necessary so that the program of events may function smoothly.

The entertainment committee is still angling for two more headline acts to augment the three already secured and while they were expected to have been secured on Monday they will, however, be ready for announcement soon.

More interest in the appearance of Dean Hudson and his orchestra is in evidence. Since this is a new orchestra in these parts, still Dean Hudson is known to thousands of radio listeners throughout the south and southwest. He is regularly heard on the Mutual network in the south.

Dean Hudson is a graduate of the University of Florida and organized his band while a student at the University. He was born in Norwood, O., 26 years ago. He moved to Kentucky at the age of five and then a year following moved to Lake Worth, Fla. He attended Lake Worth High School and the University of Florida. Dean's father played with John Philip Sousa's note band and is an accomplished musician.

In addition to his musical activities at the University of Florida, Dean Hudson also was active in athletics. He was a member of the swimming team of the university and competed in the A. A. U. 50-yard and 100-yard free style swimming meet. He holds a commission in the U. S. Army as a lieutenant in the Reserve Corps. The majority of the members of Dean Hudson's band are also graduates of the University of Florida. The band is young, the oldest member being 27 years old, and all are southerners.

Tact

"There is a quality of business relations more fundamental than salesmanship, because all need it who come in contact with others. It is a quality needed in routine situations, as well as in every sort of business and human relationship. This quality which business needs most is TACT."

"Some men are born possessing tact in exceptional degree. They are the 'good fellows' the 'mixers'—men who, with more discriminating use of words, are called exceptionally skilled 'contact men'. These possess natively the gift of 'getting along'. 'Getting along', reduced to a science, is tact."

"While working for his results, the tactful person has expert regard, at all times, for the feelings of others. It is tact, to steer clear of too forceful language. For example, don't tell a man he tells an untruth. You can express your doubt by asking, 'Are you sure that is correct?' Learn how, making a statement, to extract all the force—and offensive quality—from it. Thus, it may be tactful to say a piece of work might be done a little better instead of telling the brutal truth, which is, 'That piece of work is a wretched job!'"

"A tactful person, seeing in relations with another an approaching climax or an explosion, gets out of sight. He stays away—at least from the subject who would cause the explosion. He gives time a chance. Growing enmity has a way of disappearing with passing days and months. Hates and dislikes are forgotten. If one tactfully withdraws from the scene, a situation heading toward disaster has a way of simply dying."

"The tactful man knows how to keep his mouth shut. It is tact to conceal one's own feelings—learn how to keep them in control. You can develop ability to be outwardly pleasant. The tactful person always makes his vicinity a comfortable place in which others may work. And the tactful man always remains humble. He is respectful, courteous of all—the high and the lowly."

"There is no position in business where tact doesn't yield interest. Tact is the biggest single element in salesmanship. Salesmanship is, indeed, tact expertly developed to accomplish a single purpose—sale of articles or service."

"The tactful employee, at work over ledgers or a typewriter, contributes to the smooth and harmonious operation of the business machine. Tactful employees spell contentment for others, and contentment spells production efficiency in a most important phase. Tact may and should be cultivated. Tact should enter into employee and employer, into competitor and into buyer and seller relationships."

"Business needs intelligence. Business needs friendliness. Business needs a lot of things that it hasn't got, but the thing that business needs most is TACT."

FOR THE LOVE OF PAM

By VIVIAN GREY

Chapter 26

Bruce Confesses

IT WAS the night of the hospital benefit. The Blue Goose Arena was crowded with spectators. In a ring-side seat, beside Leo Shore, sat Pam, lovely as a flower in her gay summer print.

The main bout was due. The referee scrambled out of the ring. An announcement was made: "Our imminent townsman, Ernest Hemingway, will referee the next bout!" Everybody sat up and took notice. He was a way of picking out Doctor Shore. He hurried toward Shore. Leo saw him and was on his feet in the aisle.

"You're needed, Doctor Shore," the young man said in clipped tones. "That seaman brought in this afternoon has taken a turn for the worse."

Shore turned to Pam, but before he could speak a young man just back of them bent over and said: "Doctor Shore, let me take care of Miss Quelleron. I'll see her home. May I, Pam?"

Pam looked into the face of Algar Bruce. She wasn't especially anxious to stay. Fights didn't interest her at all. She had gone only because it was a benefit which practically all of the town supported and because Leo had asked her. She was about to say she would go home alone when Algar broke in urgently:

"Please, Doctor Shore? And will you, Miss Quelleron?"

Leo looked doubtfully from Pam to Algar, and then Pam, sensing something anxious about Bruce, said:

"All right, and thanks. Hurry along, Leo. I'll see you some other time."

"I'm sorry, Pam," Leo said. "You're sure you don't mind?"

"Sure!" she smiled. When she had finished her good-byes to Leo, Algar claimed her attention.

"Look, Pam," he said, "I'll wager you're not more interested in this than a Persian kitten would be in having the best seat at the Metropolitan."

Pam grinned at him. "You do have a way of getting at the truth, Algar."

Bruce managed to untangle his car from the welter around the arena and, with Pam beside him, drove to her home. There, sitting on the steps of the Quelleron piazza Algar went directly to his subject.

"Pam, he said, 'there's something I've got to straighten out. I blundered like an idiot in telling you of that bet at Antoine's party. I've got to make that right.'"

"Just a minute, Algar. Did Jerry send you to me?" Pam asked coolly.

"No, Jerry has nothing to do with this. Can't you give me credit for a decent impulse? I've wanted to do it before. I know how a girl would feel if she thought a fellow was dating her just on a bet, and I want to tell you the straight of that. Jerry didn't start that bet business."

"I was one of the boys in the group when it was done. I came up just after you'd gone, so I didn't recognize you. But Jerry got himself trapped into it. No fault of his own. The other fellows were the aggressors. I don't know whether I'm saying the right things or not, but what I'm trying to do is make you see Jerry wasn't actually a party to it. It was sort of handed to him. Good heavens, Pam, when a bunch of fellows are at you, you couldn't expect a man to back down, could you? Now could you?"

Half Persuaded
ALGAR talked on and on. Pam answered in monosyllables that gave no hint of her real feeling. But Pam was beginning to regard Jerry with a certain pride since learning that he had not told all of the circumstances that might have put a better face on the matter for him.

She knew, too, that part of her temper in her last quarrel with Jerry had been roused by Lenore's appearance, reminding her of Vin, his beautiful song and his talent that Lenore was treating so shoddily.

"I don't think you should hold that against Jerry," Algar was saying. "He was just trapped, that's all. Jerry's crazy about you—he was then."

When no answer came from her, he went on: "And all of the other fellows felt the same way about you. No one could blame us for that, Pam."

"All right," she said finally. "I'll try not to."

It was the next day that Pam called Jerry. She had always been quick to make amends if she felt she had been in the wrong.

Oh, Well
Hutchinson, Kans. (AP)—You can't say the Del Goyen family of near Cairo gets excited easily. The other day, while in Hutchinson,

And Jerry had, if nothing else, shown something fine when he didn't try to shield himself by blaming the other boys for starting the bet. Pam liked that.

She wasn't sure she was ready to accept him on the basis he had wanted. But at least she wanted to amend their last bitter quarrel. It would be childish, she felt, to do otherwise.

Jerry and Blaze arrived breathlessly and on foot. Another evidence, she noted, that he was trying to spare his father. He used his car no more than he had to, and had been talking of selling it if he could find a buyer.

"Are we going to be scolded and then made to do penance?" Jerry asked blithely.

"No, Jerry," she said. "We're going to be friends. But she held him off when he would have swept her into his arms."

"I said friends, Jerry," she said. "Just friends."

"Then it will be my task to make you forget ever having said such an impossible thing." He lifted her hand and kissed the tip of each finger.

"The thing that bothers me now," he said, "is how I'm going to entertain you as I'd like to. Love can't quite make up for being completely broke, can it, Pam?" he asked.

But as the days passed Jerry learned that life can be very pleasant with surprisingly little money. He learned ways to happiness and enjoyment that were decidedly inexpensive. Pam had known those ways for a long time and found a special sort of joy in showing them to Jerry.

Lenore Again
THURSDAY evenings found them listening to the band concert at Bay Park, watching with fascination while Manuel Camera beat his bass drum. Afterwards there might be a dish of sour cream, but nothing more extravagant.

There were sunsets to watch from the pier on Duval Street, glorious, ruddy-gold moments when the sun seemed to be drowning in a golden ocean.

And one morning there was a sunrise from the steps of a cabana at Rest Beach with only the sound of the water lapping softly against the sand. There were swims in the clear water through which they could see the clean sandy bottom of the ocean, and hours sunning in contented idleness on the beach.

But through it all Pam allowed no word of love. She wanted to be more sure of herself and Jerry.

Meanwhile, Jerry's family had become adjusted to their new surroundings, a simple cottage and simple living. That is, all but Lenore. She scolded and complained and blamed everyone.

"It's that little Conch Jerry had picked up!" she said one day in blind anger. "They're bad luck. Even the shells are. There isn't a native on this island who'd have a shell in his house, a conch shell! Well, Conch people are just as bad!"

"Don't be ridiculous," her father said. "You're talking like the dark ages. That little girl doesn't bring back luck to herself. She seems to be getting along very nicely so far as I can see."

"You would say that. You would be blind where a pretty girl is concerned. Men always are."

"Why, Lenore!" her father answered. "I've never heard you talk like this before. What does it mean?"

"It means I'm sick of seeing that little beachcomber getting away with everything! Getting along nicely, is she? Of course she would. What do you suppose she lives alone for? I suppose you think a nice girl would do that?"

And suppose you thing she earns all of her good clothes making these foolish little coconut things and fish-scale flowers?"

Bart Winthrop's face had undergone a subtle change. He was a little shocked at his daughter. He had known Lenore was vain and selfish, but he hadn't thought her vicious and vindictive.

"I'll think that, Lenore," he said quietly, "until I have reasons for thinking otherwise of the girl. I believe in people until I have reason not to. It might help you to do that, too."

"I've made up my mind about her. You're just blind because you want to be. Why, it's as plain as the nose on your face. Jerry's going to wake up in a nice mess one of these days!"

"Then he'll have to get out of it," Winthrop said quietly. "That's my new attitude toward you kids. You're living your own lives from now on. You're on your own."

Lenore paled. Bart Winthrop paused, a question in his mind. There had been something vaguely disturbing about Lenore's apparent fright.

He said nothing, however, but went on his way. It was time his children learned to do without the influence of the Winthrop money and name. That had been his big mistake previously—allowing them to think they had protection from everything, a sort of magic aura which nothing could penetrate, no matter what they did.

Ulster Aboriginal Tribes Had Hard Life After Settlers Came

Brief Tale of Indian Tribal Relations Tells of Red Man's Tribulations, and Indian War

The Freeman today publishes the first of a series of articles on the aboriginals and early history of Ulster county, which from the earliest period was the theatre of important and romantic events. The articles written by Ben M. Taylor of The Freeman staff and published several years ago in The Freeman are reprinted at the request of principals of the local grade schools. These educators anticipate their usefulness to pupils in the upper grades studying Ulster county history in connection with the social course, which is a correlation of history, geography and civics.

The following sketch of the aboriginal inhabitants of Ulster county and the Hudson river section is not put forth as an example of deep research, nor is there any claim that it is the last word as an authentic statement on the subject. In this latter respect it can claim kinship to at least several accounts found in published histories, which either show very apparent evidence of having been copied one from another, or else differ, in some cases, on rather important points—to say nothing of the 47 varieties of spelling of Indian names.

It seems to be pretty fairly agreed that the Indians inhabiting what is now Ulster county, at the time Henry Hudson first voyaged up the Hudson river in September, 1609, were known as the Esopus, or Esopus, Indians and that they were a clan or sub-tribe of the Lenni-Lenape, the latter subsequently known by the whites as the Delaware, because they occupied the territory from which that river derived its waters.

Turtle, Turkey, Wolf

The Lenni-Lenape were made up of three bodies or tribes—the Unami (Turtle); the Unalachtigo (Turkey); the Minsi or Munsey (Wolf). The Minsi, or "mountainers," occupied the Hudson highlands and the mountains near the headwaters of the Delaware. The Unami dwelt south of the Minsi, in New Jersey.

Alanson Skinner, whose "Indians of Greater New York," is one of the "Little Histories of North American Indians," series says, "The most important of the Minsi sub-bands in this region were the Esopus, who held the west bank of the Hudson near Kingston.

Quinlan, Sullivan county historian, says, "The Minsi, or Wolf tribe extended from Minisink (Port Jervis), on the Delaware river, where they held their council seat, to the Hudson on the east, to the Susquehanna on the southwest, to the headwaters of the Delaware and Susquehanna, to the Catskill mountains on the north and south to the Musconetcong range of hills in New Jersey."

Further notes that these tribes were divided into clans "who received their names from streams or lakes which they frequented, or from some more or less remarkable circumstances connected with their history," adding that the clan that occupied Ulster county at the time of its first settlement in 1652 was known as the Esopus. He says, "It is supposed the native name was 'Wamping'; that the territory of the Wampings or Esopus Indians was called by them 'Atkar-karton,' and that it covered the west bank of the Hudson from Catskill to Newburgh.

Jonathan W. Hasbrouck, Ulster county historian wrote: "Their hunting grounds embraced the territory between the Highlands on the south, the Sawyer's Kill (Tendeyackemuck) on the north, the Hudson on the east and the headwaters of the Delaware on the west. Hasbrouck also speaking of the further sub-division of the Esopus Indians, saying, "Those on the east side of the Shawangunk Mountains were called 'Waronawankings,' while those on the west were called 'Wawarings,' 'Neversinks' and 'Mama-katings.'"

The Mohicans

The Mohicans held the east bank of the Hudson until in the spring of 1628, when the Iroquois, who occupied what is now Rensselaer county, made war upon them and drove them beyond the Connecticut river.

An instance of how historians differ is found in statements regarding the origin of the Indians and the time of their advent, and their general character. In the Clearwater history of Ulster county, in the section devoted to the Indians, apparently written by Ruttenber, the statement is made of them, "Untouched by demoralization from contact with rude European civilizations, they were a fine people," and "They were a native people, a race that was wholly indigenous."

As against these statements, Hasbrouck writes, concerning their general character (speaking of the Esopus Indians), that the great drawback to intercourse with them was their excessive fondness for rum (to which they had been introduced by the white man) and their filthy, lascivious habits. Their presence is said to have been "offensive to the nostrils," and there is said to have been little virtue among their women.

Skinner, to whose book reference has been made, does not agree with the idea that the Indians were native to the soil. He says, at the conclusion of his chapter on archaeology: "In no case have we anything that can be taken as proof that this region was ever occupied by any other people than our native Indians and their ancestors, or by tribes very similar to them; and there is no evidence that they lived here more than five centuries before the first white settlers arrived."

As to the civilization of the Indian at the time of the arrival of Europeans, Clearwater's history says: "They were still in the age of stone, but entering upon the age of iron. This would rank their civilization as about with that of the Germans in the days of Tacitus (about the year 200 A. D.)."

In regard to criticism of the Indians, especially regarding their conflicts with the whites, Quinlan was perhaps not so far out of the way when he wrote, "We are more inclined to believe that the whole truth has not been handed down to us concerning these and other troubles with the Indians."

Hasbrouck, from whose writings most of the following has been condensed, said that the Esopus Indians were naturally war-like, but like the rest of the Lenni-Lenape and other had been effectually cowed by the Indians of the Five Nations, or Iroquois; judging from the manner in which they treated their white prisoners, they were not as blood-thirsty as other tribes.

Grand Council House
The grand council house of the Esopus savages is said to have stood near the junction of the Vernoykill and Rondout creek, at Wawarsing. This was probably on the farm at present owned by Silas V. Demarest and the latter has a fine collection of Indian arrowheads and other relics picked up and brought up by the plow at various times. This farm, by the way, goes back through several generations of Demarests and before that of their ancestors, the Van Wagenens, to an original grant by King George.

Several Indian trails converged at Wawarsing. One led over the Shawangunk mountains to Shawangunk; another to Ashokan by way of Krippelush; others branched off for the Neversink and Minisink country and the mouth of the Rondout.

Following the general custom of the Indians of the great Algonquin family, to which the Lenni-Lenape belonged, the Indians of the Hudson valley built their forts on high bluffs, near springs of water and usually not far from the bank of a stream. The forts were circular, several enclosing about an acre and were built of palisades, 12 or 15 high above the ground and set closely together.

Varied Dwellings
Unlike the long houses sheltering many families, built by the Indians of the Iroquois nation, Indians of the Algonquin tribes built small wigwags designed to house one or two families.

The wigwags of this latter type were made of poles, set in a circle 10 or 12 feet in diameter and meeting at the top. The cone shaped frame work was covered with skins or woven mats of bark. In the center was the fireplace.

Shoulder Blade Hoe

The flat lands and meadows along the streams of Ulster county were the "farms" of the Indians. They "cleared" their land by burning it over, including the brush and most of the upland timber, each fall. Their cornfields would cover 15 or 20 acres of ground. About their only tool was a hoe, made of the shoulder blade of a deer or moose and they planted their corn about the 10th of May each year, putting in each hill a fish for fertilizer. The planting was done by the women.

Red Man's Succotash

A favorite dish with the Indians and one which has retained its popularity down through the years, was succotash, made of corn and beans mixed together. The corn was also eaten roasted, or was pounded fine by a stone pestle and cakes made of the meal—the johnny cake of today. Many of these stone pestles have been picked up about Ulster county, even in comparatively recent years.

Each Indian was the head of his family and his squaw was treated as a slave and did all the drudgery. The Indians were bound by the customs of their tribe, but tribal authority was not strong and the various tribes were not closely knit as far as general laws were concerned. The more powerful chiefs of the tribe were called sachems and lesser chiefs were known as sagamores.

The Indian was superstitious, but had crude ideas of religion or worship. He saw signs of either good or evil in about everything and was a firm believer in dreams.

Dutch Trouble

Almost from the first there was trouble between the Dutch and the Indians as the latter gradually found themselves losing their best land—either through sale at a price that was decidedly one-sided, or through trickery, or through conquest. One of the earliest causes of trouble arose from the fact that the hogs, horses and cattle of the settlers wandered over the corn and beans planted by the Indians, who lived all about the first farmers at Esopus. The squaws got mad at seeing the results of their labor ruined and complained to their men and as a result the Dutch would find one of their animals dead, with a bullet or arrow through it.

One of the chief sources of trouble as time went on was the selling of liquor to the Indians. This may be said to have been the direct cause of the first Esopus Indian war and indirectly of the second, which arose from the first. In April, 1658, Jacob Jansen Stol wrote to Governor Stuyvesant: "The people of Fort Orange sell liquor to the Indians, so not only I, but the people of Great Esopus daily see them drunk, from which nothing good, but the ruin of the land, must be the consequence."

Liquor Fracas

Stol's warning was not far-fetched for it was only about a month later that some Indians who were down along the creek near the Strand obtained an anker (10 gallon) keg of rum and drank until they were maddened. One of them fired a gun and killed Harmen Jacobs, of Bamboes, who was standing on a yacht. Others fired the houses of Jacob Adriance and Andrew van der Sluis, at what is now Ponckhockie. The whites became fearful and the Indians became bolder, even going so far, it is stated, as to make the Dutch plow their land for them.

Stuyvesant was informed of the threatening attitude of the Indians and finally, by order of the Council at New Amsterdam, came to Esopus in May, 1658, with 50 men. A parley was held with the Indians. The latter claimed that the murder at the Strand was committed by a Minisink Indian and also made much of the massacre, in February, 1643, by Governor Kieft, of Indians in the neighborhood of New Amsterdam—80 of both sexes of all ages having been murdered in cold blood at one place and 40 others having been massacred at another place on the same night.

The governor told the Indians the trouble with Kieft was before his time, they must produce the murderer of Jacobs and make good for the two houses burned, but about all that came out of the affair was the building of a stockade on the flats near Stol's house.

A Year Later, War

War did not break out until over a year later. September 16, 1659, some Indians who had been husking corn at Thomas Chambers' Foxhall Manor, got drunk in the evening, following their work. Some Dutch came out and fired a volley at them as they lay around their camp fire. A few days later Sergeant Laurent and 13 men were captured as they were returning from the Strand and shortly afterward, Indians (some accounts say as many as 400 or 500), surrounded palisaded Wiltwyck. They besieged the place for three weeks during which one house was burned, with barns and stacks, one white man was killed and two wounded. In the meanwhile of those previously captured eight or nine had been made to run the gauntlet and had been burned at the stake. One of the others, a son of Everet Pels, married a squaw.

Stuyvesant Intervenes

October 9, a day or so after the siege had been raised, Stuyvesant arrived with over 150 men. He found the country flooded by recent rains and was unable to follow the savages, but strengthened the garrison at Wiltwyck and left Ensign Smith in command.

Smith led several expeditions during the months that followed. At one time he destroyed a town of 20 or 30 families and killed many of the Indians. At another he marched a distance of eight or nine miles and saw 60 savages. Three or four were killed and 12 taken prisoners. On his return he destroyed Fort "Wiltmeet" (situated in Rosendale or Marbletown).

In March Stuyvesant formally declared war and in May sent about 20 Indians who had been captured to the island of Curacao—an act that was later revenged by the massacre at Wiltwyck.

Chief Preumaker Killed

The war was ended following an expedition sent into the town of Rochester, or Wawarsing, at which time Preumaker, "the oldest and best of the Esopus chiefs," who lived below Hurley, was killed. Preumaker, who had been abandoned when the Indians fled, was taken aside by the soldiers and killed with his own axe, because he was unable to walk back to Wiltwyck.

July 15 Stuyvesant met the Indians near the Strand gate, outside Wiltwyck village and "peace" was concluded.

Dissatisfaction, especially over the exiling of the Indians to Curacao, continued and finally what is known as the second Esopus war broke out. The Indians made their way into Wiltwyck and sacked and burned the village on June 7, 1663. Accounts show that at least 12 houses were burned and many of the inhabitants killed. In the "new village," (Hurley), it is stated that every building was destroyed except one unfinished barn and one ick. Three men were killed and eight women and 26 children carried into captivity.

Stuyvesant took immediate steps against the Indians. Captain Martin Cregier with a force of men led expeditions into the valleys of the Walkkill and Rondout. Indian forts at Shawangunk and Wawarsing were destroyed as well as their wigwags and great stores of corn and beans and the Indians killed or scattered.

Indians Sue For Peace

Facing starvation and with their homes destroyed, the Indians again sued for peace and on May 16, 1664, a treaty was signed at New Amsterdam that gave to the whites practically all of the desirable land in the valleys of the Rondout, Walkkill and Esopus and put an end to native Indian troubles of any moment in these sections until the time of the Revolution.

Some mention of the second Esopus war is found in a letter written by Dominie Hermanus Blom, September 18, 1663, telling of the condition of his church "in the village of Wiltwyck in the Esopus country." He wrote, "Many heathen have been slain and full of our people have been delivered out of their hands by our arms," adding, "The Indians have slain in all 24 souls in our place and taken 45 prisoners, of whom 13 are still in their power."

In later years many of the Lenni-Lenape Indians migrated to the west and it is stated that as early as 1724 a portion of the Lenape removed from the Delaware and Susquehanna country to Ohio. A more recent writer says that the Indians (or their descendants), who formerly inhabited the Delaware valley, are now mostly located in Oklahoma, where the main body of them forms a part of the Cherokee nation. Speaking of the former inhabitants of the Esopus country, Haring says that the last survivor of the Esopus tribe lived in a shanty on the Rondout creek until his death in 1830.

Interbred Survivors

There are numerous families in Ulster county, however, who claim Indian blood. In most if not all cases this is the result of intermarriage between Indians and Negroes generations ago, and today examples of the characteristic high cheek bones and straight black hair of the original inhabitants of Ulster county are to be found.

Within less than half a century a half-breed Indian worked for the late Homer Shurtler, father of John L. Shurtler, on his farm known as Cherry Hill, on the Sawkill road. His name was Zan DuBois, although he was generally known as Zan Coon. He is described as a man of average height, but able to stand a good deal of hard work and exposure if necessary. His age was uncertain, but he had been employed by the Shurtlers for years, having worked for Homer Shurtler's father, John R. Shurtler.

GIVING PRESENTS TO EMPLOYER'S CHILDREN

Miss Typing, who has worked for Mr. Banker for over four years, explains that not only has he been very kind, but that his wife also has been extremely kind and thoughtful in many little ways. The two women have never met, because the banker's home is out of town, but they have so often talked to each other over the telephone that Miss Typing says "Mrs. Banker does not seem a bit like a stranger." Miss Typing tells me she is going away on a long trip, and she is wondering whether it might be proper to send, or to bring back, something of interest to the Bankers' little girl. She knows also that they will soon have another baby, and she asks what she may do about sending a present when the baby comes?

The answer to this is certainly, if you happen to see something when you are away that you think would please the little girl, send it to her by all means. I think it would be best (because more spontaneous) to send it from where you buy it—as something that made you think of her. When the new baby arrives, a few flowers sent to Mrs. Banker or a simple gift to the baby—or even both—would be entirely proper. You know, of course, that it will not be necessary or expected, but I am sure she would appreciate your thought, and that she can not possibly take your kindness amiss.

When To Begin Eating

Dear Mrs. Post: How many people approximately must there be seated at the table before it is proper for the first two or three served to begin eating?

Answer: The definite rule is that only one may eat when two others have been served. But at a small table set for four, the first two naturally would wait until all are served. But at a table set for twelve, one would be expected to wait only for two.

An Accordian At Wedding Ceremony

Dear Mrs. Post: I am being married at home, and since we have no piano would it be all right to have a friend play the accordian?

Answer: If you live in the country, in a plain bungalow or ranch house and you want to avoid the effect of formality, at the very simplest kind of a wedding the music of an accordian might be very pleasing. But at a wedding that is at all formal, I think it would be best to borrow a phonograph, especially in these days, when there are so many of them and such beautiful ones, and play records, which are prepared especially for weddings.

Women Waste Their Strength, Says Pearl Buck

By ADELAIDE KERR
(Feature Service Writer)
WHAT'S right with the women? So many things it is hard for Pearl Buck to list them!

But the Nobel Prize winner for literature in 1938 did inventory for me the strong points of her sex as she had observed it in both Orient and Occident.

"Women's strongest quality is their sense of reality," Miss Buck says. "Women are realists. They will cut through red tape to get done what has to be done. They see through sham more quickly than men and make a closer connection between cause and effect. They're closer to normal issues than men. If something really should be done, they don't see why it can't be done, and they'll move heaven and earth to get it done."

Men Are Evaders

"Honesty is another of women's fine qualities. Women are more honest than men. I don't know why men have such a reputation for honesty. They're not honest in business or in politics. They'll run a mile rather than have the thing out."

"Women understand more than men the psychological bases for everything—the working of human minds and behavior. They understand how people feel. This, on a small scale, is what the world needs on a large scale. Women would make good diplomats."

"Women also have great courage," Miss Buck contends that if women valued themselves properly, men do this instinctively, sometimes consciously, because equality would threaten their position. "It takes a big person to be willing to have equality," Miss Pearl Buck relaxes in the New York office of her publisher husband, Richard J. Walsh, to talk about women. They have, she says, unlimited power, too often used for trivial things.

Buck adds. "Only a person who is sure of himself dares it. The really big men equal to themselves. The smaller a man, the more terrified he is of a competent wife. In that lies the whole problem of relationship of men and women."

Teamwork Helps Marriages

"The lack of proper relationship between men and women is sure of himself dares it. The really big men equal to themselves. The smaller a man, the more terrified he is of a competent wife. In that lies the whole problem of relationship of men and women."

Shoes and Stockings, Made for Each Other!

By HELEN FORRIST HALL
(Fashion Editor)

It has taken the fashion world a long time to get feet and legs together, but now we have a shoe-and-stockings wardrobe in which stockings match or harmonize with the new colored shoes.

A store which claims it does the largest quality shoe business under one roof has just presented a showing of 65 color-ensembled shoe and stocking fashions. A purple satin high-top clog, tied high above the ankle in lavender ribbons, with silk stockings dyed to match, struck the only too-welcome note.

Red stockings, matching shoes or trims, and blue stockings, somehow didn't appear to advantage like the greens, wines and browns. But it was demonstrated that white cotton stockings, which your husband may think he doesn't like, can look smart—especially in mesh, assembled with bright red low-heeled shoes having black molded sole.

Cotton With Lacy Clocks

Cottons, incidentally, were shown in a variety of meshes and laces, with tailored or lacy clocks frequent.

Black cherry silk stockings were in perfect harmony with bronze kid shoes—but, again, fine cotton mesh hose in khaki was worn with bronze shoes. String, butter-brown and rose-nude were other colors.

Tall girls and shorties get a break in the exciting shoe designs. Think nothing, little ones, of wearing a five-inch heel—the platform sole may be so thick that your heel and toe are almost level. A tall girl may wear low-heeled dress shoes or no heels at all, if she's comfortable that way.

Comfort-seeking fashionables may look to new styles that are molded to the foot for glove-fit appearance. These include a sports shoe with molded sole. Priorities helped make this revolutionary shoe, for the pretty, soft sole is welded on to eliminate hard-to-get nails.

The Moccasin Styles

Bidding for popularity is a low-heeled, hand-sewn dress shoe with moccasin front, hand crocheted trim.

Street booties come in suede elasticized to glove-fit comfort, with open back. High in front, these may have a turn-back cuff of satin, or a leopard button trim.

Among the moccasin types there are casual sports shoes, achieved by use of unlined leathers. An antiqued calf moccasin oxford, unlined and with platform sole, was shown with beige cotton lisle stockings having a tailored clock. Very new is a dancing moccasin in suede with metallic kid ankle-strap and trim and a flat-on-the-floor look.

Soaring clogs, designed by Dominic LaValle and popularized by South American women, have nearly five inches in sole and very little shoe except an ankle strap. These were shown with large mesh black nylon stockings. Variations included a gold kid high platform sole, and use of ermine vamp and ribbon lacing.

The chopine, a naked sandal borrowed from the 16th century, is a new two-in-one, worn with a sandal toe or with a somewhat sensational suede sock which, Japanese fashion, may be taken off when you enter a friend's home!

The new shoes have wide variety of trim including snake, button, jewels, studded soles, lace edges, bows, fur and crochet.

All in all, emphasis is on foot freedom and comfort, but prettiness is important. And since leather may become hard to get, we are advised to get good shoes and wear 'em long, if we must.

City League

At another meeting of the city Bowling League held Monday evening at the Y. M. C. A. it was announced that four teams have definitely signified their intentions of entering the league. The teams are Jacks, Vinings, Generals and Colonials.

According to a spokesman of the league, Modjeskas, Mullens and Joneses are expected to enter the league. It was said at the session last night that the Emerick Recreation alleys have offered 7:30 o'clock bowling to the circuit. The Central Recreation alleys have offered the same set-up providing an extra fee is paid.

Although no official word has been given as to the site of the bowling competition this year, it is expected that the league will have its operations at Emericks. Before the league opens, about six or eight teams will have signed.

IT'S GREAT TO WIN A WORLD SERIES

ONE WORD LED TO ANOTHER, AND

After Yankee Outfielder Joe DiMaggio fled out in the fifth inning of the fifth game of the Yankees-Dodgers World Series in Brooklyn, N. Y., he started back to the dugout past the mound where he and Dodger Hurler Whitlow Wyatt exchanged hot words. DiMaggio is at extreme left. Wyatt (17) is at extreme right. The umpire between them is Bill Grieve. Also shown are Owen (10), Camilli (4) and Durocher (2) of the Dodgers. The Yanks won this game, 3 to 1, to take the World Series, four games to one.

Brigham Young's First Marriage Record Found

That the celebrated and numerous marriages of famed Brigham Young, successor to Joseph Smith, founder of Mormonism, had a humble beginning in Geauga county, Ohio, can be proved by the files in the office of Probate Judge Charles B. Lerhart, which contain Young's first marriage license.

It is now the property of an organization known as the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

The license reads: "Personally appeared Brigham Young and made application for a marriage license for himself and Mary Ann Angel of the township of Kirtland and made solemn oath that he, Brigham Young, is of age of 21 years, and the said Mary Ann Angel of the age of 18 years; that they are both single, and not nearer of kin than first cousins, that he knows of no legal impediment against their being joined in marriage. Sworn to and subscribed that 10th day of February, 1834, before me, Ralph Cowles, deputy clerk."

The signature is obviously not "Brigham" and it is not clear whether it is the signature of Brigham Young or his father, Josiah Young.

THE GREAT MOUTHPIECE

Bill McGowan and Dodger Manager Leo Durocher had these expressions on their faces as they argued in the fourth inning of the fifth—and final—Yankees-Brooklyn World Series game in Brooklyn about a pitch by Whitlow Wyatt (right). It seems that McGowan called it a ball walking Joe Gordon, Yankees second baseman. However "Lippy" Law was not given the old "heave-ho," by the arbiter.

it's perfect, and that shouldn't be very long." Although the rugged team from Amsterdam will have a decided edge on the Jackets as far as pre-season training is concerned, the local gridders intend to even that score with veteran players. This year Kingston has sought veteran linemen who will give the Wasps that needed punch in the line. So far the club, with these new men in action, appears to have found that necessary punch. Two of the new forward wall players who will start against Amsterdam are Bull McKay, 260-pound ace from Walden and Ed Trapini from Highland. Both are veterans.

Another set of veterans is ready for backfield duty. In Jimmy Ashdown, Vince Stoll, Mac Tiano and Walt Sikorski, the Jackets have one of the best balanced secondary units which has represented the club in many years. Ashdown, Stoll and Tiano are all veterans of local football. Sikorski, from upstate, is reported as an outstanding ball carrier and a great barrier on defense.

Enthusiasm over the recent work-overs of the Yellow Jackets, which have been watched by many football fans of the city, local gridiron spectators are expected to pack the stadium Wednesday night for this opening clash. The gridders have been working diligently ever since the first practice was scheduled and, if the club receives proper support from the local fan-club, it should bring back semi-

When Johnny took over the reins, it was hoped that he would drill the Jackets in the famed Notre Dame shift. Law has given a lot of his attention on this phase. However, the club will not operate under that shift Wednesday.

Yankees Have Won 32 Out of Last 36 World Series Games

Bonham's Pitching Feature of Final; Better Team Wins

Joe Gordon Hero of Series; Camilli Seen as 'Goat' for Failing at Plate; Near Fight Averted

New York, Oct. 7 (AP)—The Yankees, colossus of the baseball world, are sitting up there again, looking down at the little fellows.

Their 3 to 1 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers in the final game of the 1941 World Series yesterday only served to emphasize the dominance of the Bombers.

This was the eighth straight World Series victory for the Yankees since 1926, and when Benji Bonham downed the Dodgers with four hits yesterday it gave the boys from the Bronx the remarkable record of having won 32 of their last 36 World Series contests.

In the time since Ed Barrow came here to build the Yankee empire, his sluggers have slaughtered six of the eight National League clubs in World Series engagements. The only ones they haven't polished off are the Boston Braves and the Phillies, but give them time.

The Dodgers gave the Yanks a better scrap than did many of their National League predecessors. At least, they were not beaten four straight, and there can be no denying that they ran into more than their share of tough luck. They really put up a battle.

But the Yankees won, 4 to 1, because they were the better ball club, and never mind any one who tries to tell you differently.

Good All Around
The Yankees won because they had great pitching, tight fielding, and the ability to deliver base hits exactly when they were needed. They capitalized on every Brooklyn mistake, pulled out one game after it actually was "lost." Give a cheer for the Dodgers, because they deserve it, but never forget that they were up against a better team.

The Dodgers, themselves, knew it. They wept when Freddy Fitzsimmons was knocked out of the third game by a line drive after he had held the Yankees scoreless for seven frames. They were dumfounded when Mickey Owen, an almost faultless receiver, dropped a third strike that cost them the decision in the fourth game. But it didn't occur to them to rail at the Yankees and claim they had won on luck.

Even President Larry MacPhail, who is not renowned for his temperate remarks in the pinches, said last night: "They beat us because they were a better team." He found no fault with his Dodgers, not even Manager Leo Durocher, which constitutes a new indoor record.

All through the series the Dodgers were forced to look at pitching that curled their hair. It was known that the Yankees had a good staff and a big one, but its excellence wasn't completely appreciated. In three of the Yankee victories, Red Ruffing, Marjorie Russo and Bonham went the full nine innings. Ruffing gave the Dodgers six hits in winning the opening game, and Russo and Bonham allowed the luckless flock four apiece: That is only one pitch short of murder.

Gordon Commits Mayhem
And in the matter of hitting, Joe Gordon, the Yankees' peerless young second baseman, at least committed mayhem. He pounded out seven hits in 14 official times at bat and drew seven bases on balls, the latter tying the record for five-game World Series. He gave Gordon a batting mark of .448 for the two play-offs in which he has participated, this one and '39, another record. Furthermore, his single in the second inning of yesterday's tussle drove Bill Dickey in with the winning run.

The real feature of the deciding game, though, was Bonham's pitching. Off and on all season the big fellow was out with an ailing back. He tried wearing a brace and underwent perhaps $1,000 worth of treatment at the Yankees' expense. He didn't know from one morning until the next whether he would feel up to pitching. Yet when his big chance came yesterday to close out the still struggling Dodgers and wind up the series he fired perhaps the greatest game of his career.

Big as a mule, Bonham calmly sat the Dodgers down in the first inning with his "fork ball" and other assorted stuff. Except for the second inning, when his mound opponent, Whitlow Wyatt, socked a double to left and scored on a lucky infield hit and an outfield error, Bonham was impregnable. You couldn't help feeling sorry for the Dodgers as, in the late innings, they flailed desperately at Bonham's slants and usually popped up to the exultant Yankee infield.

This was their last chance, and they tried with the desperation of beaten men, but the only hit they got off the big man in the box after the third inning was a lone-some single by Dixie Walker in the eighth inning. Even that was a grounder that barely eluded Gordon's glove. Between the third and the eighth chapters, Bonham issued only two walks to tantalize the Flatbushers.

The Yankees had gone in front in the second inning when they scored twice on a walk to Keller, singles by Bill Dickey and Gordon and a wild pitch by Wyatt. Those two tallies, as it turned out, were all the Yanks needed with Bonham bearing down. Tommy Henrich's home run over the right field screen in the fifth only rubbed it in.

Hard Loss for Wyatt
It was a hard loss for Wyatt, who beat the Yankees 3-2 in the second game of the series and pitched his heart out to keep them in the running. He was apologetic for the trouble in the fifth inning, when he and DiMaggio exchanged hard words in the center of the diamond and players of both clubs swarmed out to join in. Both he and Joe were under a strain, Whit said, and he still admired Joe very much.

Gordon undoubtedly was the hero of the series, with Charley Keller a close second. If a "goat" had to be named, then it wasn't Owen, who dropped the third strike, but rather Dolf Camilli, the Dodgers' clean-up batter, who made three hits in 18 times up and struck out six times.

Seattle (AP)—Bill Skiff, manager of the Seattle Rainiers of the Pacific Coast League who once was connected with the New York Yankee farm chain, became acquainted with Earl Reid then.

Reid was a young pitching giant the Yanks farmed to the Portland Coast League team for experience. Recently Skiff was talking with Reid and the youngster said he was having a little trouble hiding his delivery. So Skiff gave him some pointers. Then Reid went out and whipped Seattle in his next appearance.

Okay, boys, put that war news back on Page 1. The real battle is over.

Flying Fish
Seattle (AP)—Some 16,650 finny parachute "troops" recently took over barren and tiny Crater Lake, lodged high beside Snow King Mountain in the Cascade range.

An airplane dropped five heavily-laden milk cans into the lake, with billowing parachutes breaking the fall. In those milk cans were 16,650 inch-long rainbow trout, which three years from now should be fighting 15 and 16 inches.

Van Gonsic Retains Ulster County Trapshooting Trophy

New Paltz and Woodstock Win Team Honors; Van Gonsic Collects 124 Targets

The New Paltz Rod and Gun Club retained its trophy, which it had won for the first time last year, at the Annual Sportsmen's Field Day for the trapshooters of Ulster county Sunday afternoon at the New Paltz club's grounds.

There were two main events for the day, the Ulster County Championship Team Race and the Ulster County Individual Championship. The winning New Paltz aggregation, which had a total scratch of 230 out of a possible 250 targets, included Irving Kauder, John Van Gonsic, Howard Mosher, Norman Baxter and Frank Van Gonsic.

The Handicap Trophy for teams was captured by the Woodstock Fish and Game Club with a scratch score of 214 to which the added handicap of 23 which gave the team a total handicap score of 237.

Competition for the Ulster County Individual Championship was unusually keen. John Van Gonsic came through with a 49 and was tied by H. Emerick of Saugerties.

In the shoot-off Van Gonsic won out by registered a 25 scratch. His opponent broke 24 out of 25.

Van Gonsic was the real star as he totaled a score of 124 targets out of a possible 125. Emerick won the special prize offered by Van Gonsic earlier in the day with a break of 44 straight. All gunners were entitled to enter with the exception, of course, of the donor.

Decision Due About Neutrality

act, would have to risk dangerous waters without means of defense. It was an unexpected reversal, for a number of ships operating under Panamanian registry already have been armed. And only two weeks ago Mr. Roosevelt intimated that the United States was ready under the lease-lend program to provide the little republic with guns so that additional merchantmen could be armed.

Connally, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, was of the opinion that the ruling may have resulted from "pressure by some small groups that always have entertained a political animosity toward the United States."

On the other hand, Senator George (D., Ga.), ranking member of the foreign relations group, told reporters that Panama presumably had decided that armed merchantmen flying its flag "would be dealt with as warships and therefore would be subject to attack."

Capitol Hill leaders indicated that the Panama action would be a major topic of discussion at today's White House conference.

The Chief Executive returned from a week-end at New York City and Hyde Park, N. Y., around 8:30 a. m.

Besides Connally, the conferees were Vice President Wallace, Secretary of State Hull, Senate Majority Leader Barkley, Senate Minority Leader McNary, Sen. George, Senator Austin (R., Vt.), Assistant Minority Leader, Chairman Bloom (D., N. Y.) of the House foreign affairs committee, Rep. Luther A. Johnson (D., Tex.), ranking foreign affairs committee member, and Rep. Eaton (R., N. J.), second ranking minority member of the foreign affairs group.

Willkie Asks Lead

Interest in the decisions the conference may reach was heightened last night when Wendell L. Willkie appealed to the Republican party to take the lead and fight for the neutrality act's repeal.

The 1940 Republican presidential nominee, speaking at a national Republican club dinner in New York, said "I recommend that the Republican party, through its membership in Congress, forthrightly and courageously take the leadership in the repeal of the neutrality law. It is apparent to all thoughtful people that this act should be repealed and repealed promptly."

Mr. Roosevelt first mentioned modifying the law to permit arming of American merchantmen on September 23, and the occasion for his remarks at a press conference was the torpedoing a few days earlier of an American-owned vessel operating under the Panamanian flag.

The ship was the Pink Star, a Danish freighter requisitioned by this country and turned over for Panama registry and Mr. Roosevelt disclosed that she was carrying at least one gun when she

Names of 17 Aboard I. C. White Listed

Rio De Janeiro, Oct. 7 (AP).—

Following are the 17 survivors of the sunken American-owned, Panamanian-registered tanker I. C. White, brought here today by the steamer Del Norte: William Mello, captain. Avon O. Helms, second officer. George R. Dockens, radio operator. Jens C. Christensen, chief engineer. Samuel A. Galamore, machinist.

Edgar W. Keal, Benjamin Olsen, Bryan F. Swartz, Henry G. Phillips, Joseph S. Ostreba, Roger Boyle, P. M. Ackerman, Edward H. Vega, George H. Davis, Albert Dowdy and Julius Wollslawowicz.

Christensen is Danish, Olsen Norwegian and Vega Puerto Rican. All the others are North Americans.

Seventeen more survivors are aboard the West Nilus, due later today.

went to the bottom while en route to Iceland.

"Panama's decision (regarding arming) doesn't hurt anything," Connally told newsmen. "We can amend the neutrality act and arm our ships on our own responsibility and let them fly our own flag. Maybe later on we can tell our ships they can go anywhere on the high seas."

"Many Americans will be glad to hear that our ships will not sail any longer under the flag of Panama."

It was considered possible in some quarters that the administration merely might request authority to arm the ships and send them to Halifax and other presently-barred Canadian ports but would not request that they be sent all the way to Great Britain. Under the President's proclamation designating combat areas, they already can travel to Greenland, Iceland and the Red Sea.

Besides his talk with legislative leaders, the Chief Executive invited Myron C. Taylor, his personal envoy to the Vatican, to report to him over tea this afternoon (5 p. m.). Taylor has just returned from Rome, and was expected to give the Chief Executive the views of Pope Pius XII toward war issues in general. One subject of discussion presumably was to be that of religious freedom in Russia.

Cardinal's Condition Worse

Vatican City, Oct. 7 (AP).—

Vatican City doctors said that the condition of Lorenzo Cardinal Lauri, Camerlengo of the Holy Roman Church, who recently underwent an operation, had taken a turn for the worse. Cardinal Lauri was named Camerlengo by Pope Pius XII on December 11, 1939. It is the Camerlengo's duty to act as administrative head of the church in the period between the death of a pontiff and election of his successor.

Yank Players Get $5,917.31 Cut Out of Series Competition

Single Brooklyn Share of $4,808 Is More Than Any Losing Club Earned

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—Members of the New York Yankees are $5,917.31 richer today as the result of their world series conquest of the Brooklyn Dodgers while the losers have consolation in that they each received $4,808, the largest individual cut ever earned by a defeated team in the baseball classic.

The victorious Yanks divided $181,179.14 into 32½ shares and gave an additional $6,000 to club attaches. The Dodgers split $120,786.10 in 28½ shares and $6,000 in gratuities with only 19 players, Manager Leo Durocher, two coaches and Traveling Secretary John McDonald receiving full shares.

The five games, three of which were played in Ebbets Field where the seating capacity is only half that of the Yankee Stadium, drew an attendance of 235,773 and total receipts of $1,007,762. Another $106,305.94 went to each of the clubs and the same amount to each league. $151,165.60 to the advisory council while the other first division teams in each circuit split $129,413.67. The final figures will be increased somewhat by the receipts from radio.

Treasury Will Borrow

Washington, Oct. 7 (AP).—The Treasury announced today it would borrow $1,300,000,000 Thursday in the largest single cash financing operation of the Treasury since the Liberty Loan drives of the World War. The new issue of long-term bonds will be sold to the investing public for $1,200,000,000 and an additional $100,000,000 of the new bonds will be sold for cash to government trust funds. Officials said the money was needed to finance the approximately $1,000,000,000 a month deficit being caused by defense expenditures. Since July 1 defense has cost $3,620,024,832 out of total federal expenditures of $5,362,024,455.

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—The stock market developed more life today but the expansion was on the selling side and leaders yielded a fair amount of ground.

Opening prices were shade lower. The downward slant gained momentum in the second hour, establishing many losses of fractions to around two points. These were reduced in many cases near the fourth hour. Steels and motors bore the brunt of the selling movement. Transactions were at the rate of around 600,000 shares.

Market analysts attributed the sell-off to technical conditions more than anything else. Failure of rail shares to carry through on their recent recovery, it was suggested, had played unfavorably on sentiment and thus impaired the market's capacity for taking any increase in offerings.

Speculative forces remained wary over the outcome of Germany's desperate attempt to smash Russia and there was no lessening of tension in financial offices on taxation plans, price controls and other anti-inflation steps under consideration at Washington. But brokers emphasized most of these factors have been present for some time.

Columbus Make Progress

Two German columns have been reported by authoritative London sources to be progressing slowly toward Moscow, against bitter Russian resistance, in the Valdai hills, 200 miles northwest of the capital, and Roslavl, an equal distance to the southwest. The Smolensk zone, where Russians have reported sustained counter-offensives, apparently was bypassed in between.

In Berlin, the well-informed Diest Aus Deutschland thus summed up the German position upon the reports:

"All that Germans are willing to admit is that the new operations are of such a strategic magnitude that they exceed everything else achieved in the eastern campaign."

Positions of the defenders of besieged Leningrad were represented in Moscow as strong as ever.

The Finnish army on the Karelian Isthmus, however, said miles-high clouds of smoke hung over both Leningrad and Kronstadt, the Red navy's island base to the west, as a result of bombardments by German artillery.

Differences between Berlin and London as to the scope of an exchange of wounded prisoners again held up the sailing of two British hospital ships from Newhaven, where they were loaded with 103 maimed Germans last Friday night.

Unprecedented direct radio conversations between German and British spokesmen across the channel yesterday were followed by British arrangements for the hospital ships to sail with the morning tide for Dieppe, in occupied France.

The war office, however, held up the sailing shortly after midnight—just as it had done Saturday—and authoritative Britons said the reason was a German wireless broadcast last night declaring that "so far, only a part exchange has been considered." British had a 1,500 figure in mind.

The German government has declared itself ready to exchange about 100 prisoners, "the radio was quoted," with regard to further developments on this scheme, diplomatic negotiations are still in progress.

Stade Pleads Guilty

New York, Oct. 7 (AP).—Heinrich Karl Emil Stade, 40, one of 16 spy suspects on trial in Brooklyn federal court since September 3, today pleaded guilty to a charge of conspiracy to violate the law requiring foreign agents to register with the State Department.

He thus became the first individual to plead guilty to one or both charges of an indictment which resulted in the roundup last June of 33 defendants. The maximum sentence for Stade would be two years.

Nazis Claim Ukraine Victory

France, with the victim, a Belgian, shot in reprisal for an attack against a German soldier in the French Ardennes.

In addition, five Czechs were moved down by German firing squads on conviction of preparing treason and possessing weapons.

E.N.B., the official German news agency, said the death sentence imposed on Premier General Alois Elias of the Nazi Bohemia-Moravia protectorate (in old Czechoslovakia) for "premeditated treason" had been suspended to permit him to testify against other suspects.

A Berlin spokesman declined to comment as to whether Elias had made a statement of mercy to Hitler, the only person who can commute his sentence.

The Germans denied British radio reports that 650 German hostages were being held by guerrillas in Yugoslavia.

A bulletin from Hitler's field headquarters indicated that the battle north of the Azov Sea was part of the "gigantic new developments" which the Fuehrer himself declared had begun last Wednesday.

"German troops, shoulder to shoulder with troops of the allied country, are pursuing the defeated enemy," the Nazi communique said.

Motorized and tank units thrust deep into the enemy retreating columns.

The Russians, acknowledging that the Germans had "wedged in to our lines" at an unspecified sector of the western (Moscow) front, reported that Soviet tanks and bombers had destroyed 34 Nazi tanks in fierce counter-bloves.

Nazi Losses Are Heavy

Advices reaching London said the Germans had suffered bloody casualties on the narrow Perekop Isthmus, in a drive southward into the Crimea Peninsula, and that a Nazi division had been halted at the Azov Sea, under shelling by the Red fleet.

Silent operations along the central (Moscow) front, the German high command admitted that the Russians had made a new attempt to land troops under cover of night on the Finnish gulf coast west of Leningrad, but declared:

"A majority of the ships used for transport were sunk. The enemy units which landed were completely annihilated."

Elsewhere on the 1,200-mile battlefield from Leningrad to the Black Sea, the Nazi high command said "offensive operations . . . take their planned course."

Dispatches from Leningrad said the Soviet cruiser Kirov, standing offshore, destroyed two German batteries, killed 400 soldiers and demolished 15 German tanks.

On the southwest front, the Russians reported two battalions of the 10th Austrian infantry had been routed and valuable military plans captured.

Mystery cloaked the exact direction of Hitler's vast new offensive.

While the German high command said the battle north of the Azov Sea was "in the course of announced new operations—an apparent reference to Hitler's disclosure of a new push—their sources indicated that the drive was aimed at Moscow."

Two German columns have been reported by authoritative London sources to be progressing slowly toward Moscow, against bitter Russian resistance, in the Valdai hills, 200 miles northwest of the capital, and Roslavl, an equal distance to the southwest. The Smolensk zone, where Russians have reported sustained counter-offensives, apparently was bypassed in between.

In Berlin, the well-informed Diest Aus Deutschland thus summed up the German position upon the reports:

"All that Germans are willing to admit is that the new operations are of such a strategic magnitude that they exceed everything else achieved in the eastern campaign."

Positions of the defenders of besieged Leningrad were represented in Moscow as strong as ever.

The Finnish army on the Karelian Isthmus, however, said miles-high clouds of smoke hung over both Leningrad and Kronstadt, the Red navy's island base to the west, as a result of bombardments by German artillery.

Differences between Berlin and London as to the scope of an exchange of wounded prisoners again held up the sailing of two British hospital ships from Newhaven, where they were loaded with 103 maimed Germans last Friday night.

Unprecedented direct radio conversations between German and British spokesmen across the channel yesterday were followed by British arrangements for the hospital ships to sail with the morning tide for Dieppe, in occupied France.

The war office, however, held up the sailing shortly after midnight—just as it had done Saturday—and authoritative Britons said the reason was a German wireless broadcast last night declaring that "so far, only a part exchange has been considered." British had a 1,500 figure in mind.

The German government has declared itself ready to exchange about 100 prisoners, "the radio was quoted," with regard to further developments on this scheme, diplomatic negotiations are still in progress.

Men's Club of St. John's Church to Hold Dinner

The Men's Club of St. John's

Episcopal Church, Albany and Tremper avenues, will hold a public turkey dinner on the evening of October 30. The proceeds will go to the visual education program of the church, which is going forward under a capable committee headed by Ernest Drewes, Walter Elston, Rodney DuBois and William Smith.

To open this program, the Men's Club on Thursday night will show a group of sound movies on "Life in the U. S. Army Under the National Defense Program."

The several reels to be shown include the titles "Here Comes the Cavalry," "Wings of Steel" and "Service With the Colors." An army representative will be present, and an opportunity will be had for questioning and discussion on the national defense program. This program is open to all men of the parish and any friends who may care to come. The parish hall is equipped with a 9x12-foot glass beaded screen which shows these movies to best advantage.

The Men's Club recently installed in the church a new pulpit desk and lamp under the leadership of Harry Simmons, Ernest Drewes and Bertrand Burr.

Council Report Expected On Old Brewery Razing

The building and supply committee of the Common Council is expected to submit a report this evening at the council session recommending that the contract be awarded for the demolishing of the old Hauck brewery and leveling off the ground.

The committee met Monday evening at the city hall and opened three bids which had been made for the contract. As the committee planned to submit a report to the council no information was given out before the council session.

Some time ago when the city acquired title to the property through a tax sale a contract was awarded for the tearing down of the brewery at Wurts and McEntee streets, but it was claimed that the contractor did not fulfill his contract and it was cancelled.

When the building is demolished and the ground leveled it is expected that the site will be used for a parking ground for automobiles.

side a trail two miles from the picnic scene.

Shows No Fright

She was smiling and showed no fright.

"I've been out in the rain and cold since Sunday," she told Matson. "I've been drinking out of brooks and everything, but there hasn't been anything to eat. I want to see my mummy and daddy."

News of her safety led some observers to the belief that she had been kidnapped and released, but Dr. Charles Smith, who examined her after she was taken to a hospital, said there was nothing to indicate she had been out of the woods.

"She apparently had all the water she needed, but she had nothing to eat," said Dr. Smith. "Her feet showed some frostbite and were quite swollen." Because of the swelling, her sneakers were cut from her before she was placed in bed. Her first "meal" consisted of orange juice and lactose toast.

Hope Is Abandoned

Scarcely an hour before she was found, High Sheriff James Welch announced that hope of finding her alive had been abandoned.

But the search went on—as it had for the last few days—largely because the girl's father, Joseph Hollingsworth, Lowell, Mass., business man and civic figure, refused to quit. He stayed in the search area constantly from the time the girl disappeared.

Notified by portable radio at the base camp that Pamela was alive, he raced up the trail and carried her down in his arms, almost too overcome to speak.

Then he called his wife, who had been confined to bed, grief-stricken, in Lowell. She arrived at her daughter's side a few hours later, exclaiming: "Oh, it's wonderful!"

Matson, hardly believing his eyes when he first saw the child, could only ask: "What's your name?" "Pammy," said the girl. "You are in better shape than we are," he told her.

Hollingsworth, clutching the girl to him after making part of the trip along the narrow trail in an army jeep car, asked: "Were you afraid, Pam?"

"Oh, no," she replied calmly, "but it was cold."

She appeared concerned that her hair was muddy and that she had lost her blue hair ribbons.

New System Tried To Quicken Work In Supreme Court

In an effort to speed up the trial of civil cases in this county Justice Harry E. Schirick has placed in effect at this term of Supreme Court a plan which has worked out very well in other counties of the district. Instead of placing a dozen or more civil cases on the day calendar, only six cases will be placed on the calendar and all of the cases must be ready for trial when called.

At the opening of court Monday he suggested that the plan be given a trial. Six cases were placed on the day calendar and all must be ready for trial when reached. Justice Schirick informed all attorneys that they must be prepared to go on at a half hour's notice should the case ahead of them be concluded for any reason. The clerk of the court will keep attorneys informed as to the progress of cases ahead of them so that they will be ready when their case is reached.

The day calendar will be kept at the six cases by additions as cases are tried.

Jurors were excused Monday afternoon until 10 o'clock this morning and this morning an equity case without a jury was taken up. Jurors were consequently dismissed until 2 o'clock this afternoon. Reformation of a deed was involved in the action moved this morning with Mr. Goldstein for plaintiff and Judge Joseph M. Fowler and N. Jansen Fowler for the defendant.

The calendar today was Nos. 163,

98, 150, 162 and 88. In No. 162, a settlement is pending.

Settlements were announced Monday in Nos. 92, 229, 216, 56 and 91.

Justice Schirick struck from the calendar Nos. 225, 226 and 227, actions in negligence brought by Samuel Weisberg, Morris Stoff and another against Isadore Levinson and another, on the grounds that they had come under the strike-off order back in 1938 and had been stricken from the calendar at the March term by Justice Bergan. Plaintiff's attorney had placed them back on the calendar without having served a new note of issue or having made any application to the court. Justice Schirick said once a case went off under the strike-off rule it was definitely off unless application to restore was made to the court.

Berle Says Flier Follows Pattern of Berlin Propaganda

Lindbergh Abuses Freedom of Speech by Making Irresponsible Talks, He Declares

New York, Oct. 7 (AP)—Assistant Secretary of State Adolf A. Berle, Jr., charges Charles A. Lindbergh with "following the exact line which has been laid down in Berlin for the use of Nazi propagandists in the United States."

Recent statements made by Lindbergh, Berle told the Harvard Graduate School of Business at the Harvard Club last night, illustrate "the danger of betraying one of the free people—freedom of speech—by irresponsible statements."

Berle asserted that the state department learned a short time ago that Berlin sources had instructed Nazi agents in the United States that "a howl was to be raised" that President Roosevelt was attempting to become a dictator and that the dictatorship would be "a dictatorship of Jews."

"It is a matter of coincidence that somewhat later we were favored by two speeches from Mr. Lindbergh," he added. "One of them asserted that Mr. Roosevelt, assisted by a Jewish clique, was plunging us into war—although any sane person could see that the war was, in fact, plunging toward us. The second speech intimated that the President would call off the congressional elections of 1942 and thereby make himself dictator. Naturally, no evidence was offered of this amazing yarn."

"However sincere the motives of Mr. Lindbergh may have been, I think you will agree with me that he is following the exact line which has been laid down in Berlin for the use of Nazi propagandists in the United States. . . ."

Tornado Kills 3, 135 Are Injured In Kansas City

estimates of property loss were available, but one plant alone, the Kay-See Mills, suffered a loss of $50,000.

Many victims were buried in the wreckage hours after the twister passed and some were near death when rescuers reached them.

Mrs. Dorothy Lucas, 25, and her 18-month-old daughter, Diana, were crushed to death, their bodies blown 500 feet. Two hundred feet farther on was the wreckage of their home. The only intact portion was the door casing which was driven upright in the yard.

Mrs. Ella Perkins, 51, was killed in the wreckage of a friend's home. Her own cottage, a few blocks away, was undamaged.

There were many amazing escapes. His leg broken, T. R. King was found pinned beneath twisted water pipes in the basement of his home hours after his house was carried away. His head was in a pool of water and he was near death from drowning, but was revived.

Mrs. Maggie Sutton suffered a broken back as the twister lifted her house away. Three of her five children were blown away. Rescuers found them hours later, none injured seriously.

All in All, Present Rip Is Pretty Good

Howard E. Van Winkle, 52, lives in Stone Ridge, not too far from the legendary Catskills.

(Sure, they call him Rip.)

Van Winkle's ancestors lived for many, many generations in that area fictionalized by Washington Irving.

(Yes, the old settlers say his great great grandfather was the original Rip who took the 20-year nap.)

Last night Van Winkle, an apple grower, attended a meeting of the Hudson Valley apple harvesting committee in this city. Price stabilizing problems were discussed; then Theodore Oxholm, chairman, called for Rip's opinion.

But there was no answer. (You guessed it—Rip was sound asleep.)

Deer Season Date Set

The deer season opens in the Catskills on November 15 and continues through to November 30, while in the Adirondacks the season opens the first of November and continues through the month.
